

grease; but some of the citizens that know no better, will pay a good price for it. According to your instructions, I borrowed a thermometer the next time I had to churn, and did not commence churning until the cream was of a proper temperature. The result was, that I got the butter in 15 minutes, which was of much better quality, and more in quantity. I repeated the instructions the second time, the result was even more satisfactory—I procured the butter in 12½ minutes. If consider this alone worth ten times the price of your paper to me. Every farm house in the country should have a copy of the paper. I am so well pleased with it, that I shall try and get up a club for it. Please inform me where I can procure a good thermometer.

Miscellaneous.

Persons in arrears for their Agricultural paper, should pay at once without further delay.

Patrick saw a bull pawing in a field, and thought how amusing it would be to jump over, catch him by the horns, and rub his nose in the dirt. The idea was so funny that he lay down and laughed to think of it. The more he thought of it the funnier it seemed, and he determined to do it. Bovus quickly tossed him over the fence again. Somewhat bruised, Patrick leisurely picked himself up, with the consolatory reflection: "Well it is a mighty fine thing I had my laugh forst."

An avaricious fellow in Brussels gave a large dinner. Just as the guests sat down, a piercing shriek was heard in the courtyard. The host hurried out, and returned pale, affrighted, and his hands covered with blood. "What is it?" was the inquiry. "Alas! he said, "a poor workman, father of a large family, has met with a terrible accident; he was knocked down by a cart and grievously wounded. Let us aid him." A collection was taken up, and the guests contributed twelve hundred francs. Generous souls! It was the miser's ruse to make them pay for the dinner.

Lawyers must sleep more comfortably than people in general—it is immaterial on which side they lie.

"I wish," said an irate lawyer, "you would pay a little attention to what I say." "I am," answered the witness, "paying as little as I can."
