

BE KIND TO THE OLD FOLKS.

Don't forget the old folks, Love them more and more,
As they with unshrinking feet
Near the shining shore.
Let your words be gentle,
Loving, soft and low;
Let their last days be the best
They have known below.

Don't forget thy father,
With his failing sight,
With his locks once thick and brown Scanty now and white;
Though he may be childish,
Still do thou be kind;
Think of him as years ago,
With his master mind.

Don't forget dear mother,
With her furrowed brow, Once as fair, and smooth, and white
As the fresh young snow.
Are her steps uncertain?
Is her hearing poor?
Guide her gently, till she stands Safe at heaven's door.

A ROMANCE.

Once on a time there was a little girl and there was a little cat, and they lived five miles from each other, and the little girl had never heard of the little cat, and the little cat had never heard of the little girl.

The little girl's name was Nell, and she lived with her grandparents, and she was lonesome, because she was all the young, small, little person there was in the house. The little cat's name was Capertoes; and he was lonesome, because he was a barn cat and a "great hunter." Now, cats like to catch rats and mice; but they like other things, too—such as fires and rugs, and gentle words, and the touch of a gentle hand.

Now, Capertoes had grown sick of the barn, and of rats and mice; and one night he left the barn and set out to "seek his fortune." It was a long, cold, snowy road; and Capertoes went, and went, and went all night. But, at the end of the night and at the end of the road he found his fortune.

As he was passing a house, a little girl with brown eyes and brown hair opened a window, and called to him,
"Kitty, Kitty!"

Capertoes stopped; and, after, looking at her a minute, he went up to the window. The little girl told him her name was Nell, and asked him what his was. And when he had heard her talk abit, he liked the sound of her voice, and the touch of her hand was soft and gentle; and presently when she asked him if he would not like to be her cat, he jumped in and stayed, and was her cat always afterward. But his name there was Velvetcoat, not Capertoes.

most pleasant, powerful, and certain pain remedy in the world. Sold by will attend to the case.' 'Ah!' thought I to myself, 'there is Joe Simmons, whom I don't like, I'll watch him, and if I see him look off his books, I'll tell.' It was not long before I saw Joe look off his book, and immediately I informed the master.

'Indeed,' said he; 'how did you know he was idle?' 'I saw him,' said I.
'You did? And were your eyes on your book when you saw him?' I was caught, and I never watched for idle boys again. If we are sufficiently watchful over our own conduct, we shall have no time to find fault with the conduct of others.
