THEIR ROYAL HIGHNESSES

Arrived at Quebec Amidst Booming of Cannon and Great Eclat and Witnessed by Largest Crowd Ever Seen in City—Rumor That Royal Visit May Not Extend West of Quebec.

From Saturday and Monday's Daily.
Quebec, Sept. 16, via Skagway, Sept. 21.—Amidst booming of cannon and whistling of hundreds of steam vessels the Duke and Duchess of York and Cornwall arrived today on schedule time, the arrival being witnessed by the largest crowd ever seen in this city. As the steamer Ophir bearing the royal party, and escort, steamed into the harbor a royal salute was fired from the fort, another from the French frigates lying in port, and a third from the Citadel. Immediately after the salute the Ophir and other steamers half-masted the Stars and Stripes out of respect for the dead president of the United States. At 10:30 o'clock Lord Minto, governor general of Canada, and Premier Laurier boarded the Ophir and had a short interview with the duke and on their return to shore the royal salute was again fired. Their royal highnesses came ashore in a launch, the cannon booming again. A heavy squall made the landing quite difficult. The duke and duchess were driven to the parliament building in a four-horse carriage. The duke was dressed in naval uniform and acknowledged the cheers that greeted them as they rode along by raising his hat. At 1:30 they left parliament building for the Citadel where they were the guests of Lord Minto at lunch, after which they went to the Naval University where degrees were conferred by the duke. Later the royal visitors attended an open air concert on King's Bastion, and in the evening there was an illuminated naval parade. It was rumored yesterday that the royal trip will not extend west of or beyond Quebec.

SHROEDER'S HARD LUCK

Loses His Cabin and $190 in Cash by Fire.

Last evening about 10 o'clock a cabin on the hill back of St. Mary's hospital was discovered to be on fire and although quite a large crowd gathered it was impossible to do anything towards saving it as there was no water in the vicinity, and it was out of the reach of the fire department. The cabin was owned by Mr. Schroeder foreman of the work on the new administration building and is the farthest building on the north side, situated almost at the foot of the big slide on the hill. The cabin was occupied by Len Cousins, a young man who is working on the administration building. He went home about 8 o'clock and built a small fire in the stove and went to bed. There is no flooring on the cabin but a layer of sawdust and shavings makes a covering for the bare ground. Mr. Cousins thinks that a live coal must have fallen from the stove and caught fire to the shavings on the floor, for when he was awakened by the smoke which filled the cabin he could see the fire smoldering all around the edge of the room. The walls are covered with wrapping paper and is loose at the bottom. He opened the window to get out and in a second the flames sprang up and filled the room and just barely had time to get out with his life. As it was one of his arms was painfully burned. He attempted to re-enter the cabin for his clothing but found it impossible. He reached his hand in the window and got his watch which was hanging by the side of it and he also saved his overcoat which was on the bed. These were all the articles he saved. Besides all of his clothing and personal effects he lost $190 in currency. He estimates his loss at $250. He was intending to leave for a trip to the outside next week but the fire has upset his plans and he says he will have to remain here another winter. The cabin was burned completely to the ground.

THE ICY MITT FOR BRADY

Alaska's Governor Reputed by Klukwan Indians.

Governor Brady has been turned down again, this time by the very Indians whom he claims he wants to protect and allow to vote. After all the missionary work he has done (and the money he has made) amongst their people, the Siwash of Klukwan, through their chief, publicly tell him that they are not on to him, and they don't like his style. When Governor Brady left Skagway on the revenue cutter Rush last week, after an Arctic expedition, he went up the Chilkoot river to Klukwan to visit the Indians, the great man he was, and look around for another sawmill site. At the request of the governor about thirty Indians and their chief gathered to hear the big white chief talk. This was Governor Brady's first visit to Klukwan and the Indians, through courtesy, listened, thinking possibly he might be of some assistance. With the eloquence with which he is famous when talking to Siwash Governor Brady expatiated on his official position, the future of the Siwash race and incidentally let drop a remark that next winter Shellgame Jackson might drive in on the ice with a team of reindeer and start a school. This reference to schools raised the wrath of the chief, for ever since Brady has been governor of Alaska the chief has communicated with him in regard to school, but each time the matter was overlooked in the excitement of the governor's—the enfranchisement of the red men. When the governor ceased speaking, the chief rose to answer his address. Through his interpreter he said: "This is the governor's first visit to Klukwan. We are glad to have him here and see what kind of a man he is. But his speech, especially in regard to schools, and what he will do for us reminds me of a story I will now tell. "A long time ago the Indians of Klukwan secured a large cannon and made arrangements to fire it off on a certain day. All the neighboring Indians were invited to hear the noise. When the time came and all were assembled the fuse was lighted, but the fuse simply spluttered and then went out; the powder was wet; it was a fizzle. "Amidst the wild cries of his tribe the chief of the Klukwan sat down and the governor and his party started to embark down the river for the Rush, Alaska. "Fine furs of all kinds at Mrs. Roberts' new store on Second avenue.

TO IMPROVE THE YUKON

Much Money and Labor Will Be Expended.

MYSTERIOUS STAMPEDE

Left Yesterday Afternoon, Whither No Man Knows.

Chicago, Sept. 16, via Skagway, Sept. 21.—The police have been unable to discover any evidence that President McKinley was the victim of an anarchist plot. Extensive improvements in the matter of dredging and damming are about to be undertaken on the Upper Yukon, according to reports received yesterday from interior points from passengers of the steamer City of Seattle. They are to be made under the direction of Superintendent Tache, of the public works department. The chief work contemplated is the completion of the 4000 feet of dam to confine the water at the head of Lake Lebarge in one deep channel, the removal of one of the fingers at Five Fingers and three boulders from the Thirtymile river that are a great menace to navigation. The work of dredging the channel at Upper Lebarge is now in progress and will possibly be finished this fall. The three boulders in Thirtymile river will be taken out some time in September. All told there have been nearly two hundred boulders taken out of Thirtymile. Some little work has already been done at Five Fingers, and it will be concluded after the river freezes. Nothing is to be done to Hell Gate until next season, when the department can expend its entire energy at that point.—P.-I.

NO BAIL GRANTED

To Drunks Run In After Respectable Retiring Hour.

If there is one thing upon which all humanity agrees it is on possessing an antipathy to being disturbed after donning the long, white, unstarched robe of night and lying down to gentle slumber. It is then that, unless the person is a doctor, a fireman or a country justice of the peace that is given to marrying runaway couples, it is not on his schedule to be disturbed until the advent of the following day. In police court this morning Magistrate McCauley good naturedly informed Sergeant Smith to pass the word down the line that in future he, the magistrate, is not to be aroused from his slumbers at 2 o'clock, as was the case this morning, or any other unseasonable hour of the night for the purpose of accepting bail until 10 o'clock next morning for a common drunk, and hereafter the fellow who steams around town until that hour, when he might just as well as not hurry along his drunk and be arrested the previous evening, will remain in the laughing house from the time of his arrest until court opens the following morning. The above is published for the benefit of those who are interested, and as each man probably understands himself and knows just about what time he can count on after taking the first drink until he is ready to go to the barracks, he will do well to regulate the time of the first drink accordingly. For example, the man who requires eight hours should begin to steam up, not later than 2 o'clock in the afternoon; while others who drink more assiduously can begin after an early supper and still be able to cover the line and be granted bail before time for winding the clock, putting out the cat and going to bed.

Roosevelt Outlines His Policy

Buffalo, Sept. 16, via Skagway, Sept. 21.—President Roosevelt has outlined the policy which will be pursued through his administration. He will continue in McKinley's footsteps, endeavoring to abolish commercial wars with other countries and to establish reciprocal treaties with all powers with which the United States deals. He will encourage the merchant marine and urge the construction of the Isthmian canal and Pacific cables. He favors the establishment of government savings banks for the protection of the people's savings. No indication of any changes in the cabinet has been made.

ABSCONDING DEBTORS

Take a Long Chance When They Attempt to Evade Justice.

Events which have recently transpired show the futility of criminals attempting to evade the arm of the law in this district for justice is swift and capture almost certain. The wonderful celerity with which the absconding debtor was captured, William Carkeek is an evidence in point. He was indebted to the N. C. Co. $1897 and, although with sufficient assets to liquidate the indebtedness, he decided to sneak away Wednesday night via the small boat route. Carkeek was observed by the vigilant officers of the company acting suspiciously and a watch was immediately set on his movements with the result that he was traced to an awaiting boat with which he decamped. Herb Robertson, the company's attorney, at once started for the sheriff's office where a capias was issued. Forty miles was then notified to await the fugitive. The police immediately started from that point and intercepted the man whom they placed under arrest. He was returned on the steamer Campbell last night and in possession of the amount of his indebtedness. Justice is swift in the Yukon.

REDUCTION ASKED FOR

Commissioner J. H. Ross Informs Ottawa of Needed Changes.

Ottawa, Aug. 25.—James Ross, commissioner of the Yukon, has forwarded to the minister of the interior here a number of recommendations for changes in the existing mining regulations. The chief of these is his suggestion that the present system of collecting royalty of 5 per cent on the gold output of the Yukon be abolished. Mr. Ross would replace the royalty by an export duty to be collected at the boundaries of the several mining districts. He recommends that where gold is found upon which the export duty has not been paid it be confiscated. This, he thinks, would effectually check attempts to evade the duty and prevent the smuggling out of gold which is undoubtedly carried on at present under the royalty system. In support of the suggestion for the establishment of an export duty the commissioner points out that while the duty would be collected in the first instance on all the gold produced, arrangements could be made to grant a rebate upon such proportion of the gold as might be marketed at Canadian points. It is also the intention of the Yukon administration to throw open about 1000 acres of wood land on the banks of the Klondike, which was reserved for mining purposes. This move is necessitated by the growing scarcity of wood for fuel. Indeed, in the opinion of the commissioner it will not be long before electricity and coal oil will of necessity supplant wood as fuel in the mining districts. Another proposal is to encourage the construction of reservoirs built to catch water after it has been used in the sluice boxes so it can be returned and re-used for gold washing. By this means it is hoped to avoid the necessity of closing down operations owing to scarcity of water such as was the experience during the drought this summer.

His Leg Broken

Henry Riger, head Sawyer at the Yukon sawmill, met with a painful accident this morning which will confine him to his room for a week or two. While at work a board which was being run through the edger saw back striking Riger's right ankle with sufficient force to break it. The injured man was removed to St. Mary's hospital.

Gold Commissioner's Court

Gold Commissioner Senkler rendered a decision yesterday in the case of Walter A. Boulbee vs. Denis Benoit concerning the upper half of 56 above on Bonanza. The findings are that the evidence of the plaintiff is not sufficient to prove that the defendant did not stake the ground in dispute and his case is dismissed with costs.
