THE IRISH PROPOSALS

IRISH LEGISLATION TO GO BE-FORE BRITISH COMMONS.

Powers of the Proposed Irish Council Defined - Irish Secretary to Be Chairman-Irish Boards to Be Abol-"ished - Financial Arrangements-Powers to Be Devolved Those Generally Grouped Under the Head of "Local Government."

Two English clergymen, one a very stalwart and muscular Christian, the other a frail little man, went for a sail at Brighton, accompanied by an old salt. When they were some distance out at sea the wind commenced to blow a gale, so the sailor hauled down the sheet and said, "Now one of you gents and me will have to take to the oars to get her home." The muscular Christian said, "Very well, my friend will row, and I will pray." "No, no," responded the sailor; "you row.

Let the little un pray."

Further information has been received as to the manner in which the Irish proposals will be carried out. All the members of the Irish Council or the majority of them will be directly elected. "Legislative Assembly" of Mr. Gladstone's bill, only that thay will form one body and not two. Yet it will be REGAINED NERVE AND VITAL remembered that in 1893, whilst it was provided that they should sit and vote

An important office may be given to the Chief Secretary in the scheme. He would be ex-officio chairman of the Irish Council. Like the Speaker of the House of Commons, he would take no part in debate, and only vote when there was a tie, if at all. As representing the Lord Lieutenath be would senting the Lord Lieutenant, he would send for the leader of the party having a majority in the Council, and would in consultation with him appoint the chief heads of departments. The head of the finance department would oc council on the recent outbreak of spot-ted fever at Fincham, expresses the opinion that the infection was spread by a well, the water of which was used for washing the utensils of a local dairyman.

The object of these arrangements is to give the Chief Secretary and Lord Lieutenant ar executive possessing the confidence of the representatives of the Irish people.

As chairman of the Council, the Chief Secretary would be charged with the duty of ruling as a matter of or-der, but, if necessary, on the advice of the law officers of the Crown, whether, in any measure or action proposed, the Irish Council or its Ministers would exceed their statutory functions. Against his decisions there would be a right of appeal, probably, as in the bill of 1893, to the Court of Exchequer or the King in-Council, imitating colo-

Abolition of Boards.

The scheme includes a reorganization of the Irish Government. many Irish Boards will be recast into a few well-defined and compact dea few well-defined and compact de-partments, such as finance, land, edu-cation, transit, police, etc. The ju-diciary will not be molested, the bill now before Parliament for the reduction of the numbers of the bench being a step sufficient for the present. The Lord Chancellor, the Attorney-General, and the Solicitor-General will continue to be members of the Imperial Parliament, and to be Ministers responsible to it, and not to the Irish Council. They will attend the Irish Council, but not vote or speak, except in an advisory sense, after being called upon by the chairman.

The Chief Secretary would be the spokesman of the Irish Council and its now before Parliament for the reducon to Westminster for simple passage or rejection. Adopting a now disused form of Parliamentary procedure, for-merly common, the Irish Council may initiate legislation by means of Ordersin-Council, or by resolutions, which, if passed, would, in the ordinary course, be drafted into a ministerial measure for the Imperial Parlaiment. Thus, if the powers of the Irish Council are a few the state of the council are a few these are cil are at first limited, its freedom of The Meanest Man.

Irishmen—would be practically unlim-

Financial Arrangements.

The financial arrangements will be the crux of the scheme. Simplicity will be aimed at. The elaborate pro-visions of the bills of 1885 and 1893 will not be revived. The fixing and collection of taxes will remain with the Imperial Parliament. Customs, excise, postoffice, etc., will be as at present. The plan adopted will be to meet all Imperial charges first. Ireland's net contribution to the Imperial Proheguer is less than 2,000,000 and Exchequer is less than £2,000.000, and her total sum raised by taxes about £9,500,000. Of the balance of £7,500,000, nearly half is earmarked for one purpose and another, but it is estimated that about $4,000,000 of Irish ex-penditure could be handed over to the Irish Finance Department, and placed under the control of the Irish Council. To follow existing methods as closely as possible, the Irish estimates would be laid before the Irish Council first, and discussed in detail. They would then be laid en bloc before the Imperial House of Commons, and would give Irish members and other the usual opportunity for a general discussion. The Irish Council would sit when the Imparial Pasilonnest are the statement of the Imparial Pasilonnest and Institute of the Imparial Pasilonnest are the Institute of the Institute of Institu Lydia—I'm just as mad as I can be with Charlie. He kissed me right before all the girls.

Georgette—Well, isn't, that better than if he had kissed all the girls before the control of the perial Parliament was not in session.

Members of the Irish Council, if Irish Ministers, would not be answerable for their acts in the House of Commons when they were members of that body also. The Chief Secretary, as their Ministerial chief, would assume the onus of any defence or explanation. For various reasons, it is

In addition to these powers, section 36 of the bill of 1893 will be adapted service. That section dealt with the state of transition between the old system and the new one proposed, and it gave very wide powers to the Lord Lieutenant, by way of orders-in-Council, to change the Irish Administration, and even to modify the law, so long as no new principle were introduced. Certain subjects, including, it is said, the land legislation, will be delegated to the Irish Council on these lines. The Law Offices of the Crown, advising the

A QUIET BACHELOR.

Easygoing Brother of the Dead South African Croesus Is One of the World's Rich Men.

By the death of his brother Alfred, to Belt, a bachelor, aged 50, becomes practically the richest man in England certainly the richest untitled citizen The fortune of the dead millionaire is conservatively estimated at any figure between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000, and as the bulk of this is left to his brother, Otto Beit must be regarded as the king of Englishmen of wealth.

It is lucky for Otto Beit that he had a brother possessing such tenacity of purpose—so keen, shrewd, and enter— prising—because if left to his own ini— ttative it is doubtful whether he would ever succeed in controlling millions. There were no two brothers who pos-There were no two brothers who possessed more widely different characteristics. In the midst of all his financial worries and excitements the late Alfred Beit was always devotedly attached to his own family and relatives, and when fortune came he shared it liberally with them all. The happy-go-lucky dis-position of his brother appealed to him-though he was himself one of the most matter of fact of men who ever invested a dollar.

Brothers Opposite as Poles.

"I have enough to establish us both as millionaires." he was once heard to as millionaires, he was once heard was any at a convivial gathering of South African millionaires. "Otto, if left to himself, might or might not work out his own fortune, but it is a thousand to one on the 'might not.' He might become the controller of a small store. or something like that, but there is no material in him for a self-made millionaire."

Alfred was a man of method and determination in everything he had undertaken. Otto, on the other hand, was inclined to take things easy and let opportunities slide. Perhaps it was the feeling that his brother had accumulated sufficient wealth to supply the family wants a thousand times over and to keep their old mother in Hamburg supplied with luxuries that caused him to incline more to the pleasures and enjoyments of society than he otherwise would.

There is no reason why he shouldn't, so far as his mother is concerned, for so far as mother is concerned, for the old lady lives monotonously at the family home in Germany and finds ap-parently some difficulty in getting through with the $5,000 a year which it was Alfred Bek's first ambition to secure for her.

Happy-Go-Lucky Croesus.

Immediately Alfred Beit saw the foundation of his own fortune laid, he shared all his confidences and the most of his investments with his brother, so of his investments with his brother, so that Otto Beit developed into a mil-lionaire back in 1889 quite as rapidly and quite as unexpectedly as he has and quite as thexpectedly as he has now become a multi-millionaire. Although he has been personally acquainted with almost every detail of his dead brother's financial and industrial undertakings, he has taken but little actual share in directing or controlling

His brother used him as a sort of a courier when important dispatches re-lating to hurried finance had to be carried between London, Paris, Berlin, and South Africa. At the offices of south Africa. At the offices of the great firm of Wernher, Beit & Co. he was seldom seen. One of the heads of the departments, in detailing his experiences of the two brothers, said:

"The governor, although a most humane and considerate man, was excessively exacting in all matters relating to business. We always expected a found him already wading through piles of correspondence. When Otto took his place we always were prepared for an evening out; and to have what we liked in drinks and cigars."

Is Not a "Man About Town"

It would not be right to say that Otto Beit has been a man about town. He lacks the foolish extravagance of the "Johnnie," but he likes the theatre. the music hall, and the opera, both before and behind the scenes. Indeed, it was once suggested that if he married at all he was sure to succumb to the fascinations of some one of dozen or so beautiful actresses were always ready to share his hospi where always ready to state in adoptive tallity at one or other of the restaurants where he is wont to entertain.

While the new multi-millionaire is fond of life and the excitements of fashionable London, there is objectionable in his manner of doing objectionable in his manner of doing things. He dresses with great care, but resembles his late brother in abhorring jewelry. He carried sometimes a common oxidized metal watch to which is attached a leather strap hed which is attached a leather strap held to his waist coat button hole by means of a buckle.

He likes sport, from boxing, wrestling, billiard playle g to horse racing, and has now succeeded to his brother's racing stables in Germany, which are. however, of no great consequence. His patronage of sport is, however, more of the quiet, unassuming type than of the senseless extravagances of the youth who has just come into an unexpectable that the state of the senseless extravagances of the youth who has just come into an unexpectable that the state of the senseless that the pected inheritance. His luncheons, toth at fashionable hotels and at his private residence, are distinguished for the absence of shady financiers, butter-fly lordlings, and parasitical sports.

His Tastes Extremely Simple. Unlike his brother, Otto does not be-lieve in the early to bed and early to rise rule, but as he does not saturate himself with wine and keeps in form by means of plenty of physical exercise, a little sleep satisfies him. A dip in the lake in Hyde Park in the early morning is a luxury he never misses when he is in London. He and a couple of his dogs may be seen having their bath any morning during the summer months. In the choice of his food he is peculiarly simple in his habits, and prefers a chop or steak to anything else. For this reason he has no distinguished continreason he has no distinguished continental chefs or cooks of European fame on his premises at 49 Belgrave square. Incidentally, he inherits his brother's beautiful house in Park lane, but it is understood that he is going to sell it.

While Alfred Beit was accumulating millions for himself and his friends his brother Otto was cultivating the socie-ty of London's proudest aristocrats. One was the financier, the other the sprightly bohemian courtler, and in this It pours the oil of life into your system. It warms you up and starts the life blood circulating. That's what Hollister's Rocky Mountain was the brothers succeeded in bring-trea does. 35 cents, Tea or Tablets.
