A WHITE CHRISTMAS

98 children had been cared for. This was only a small part of the work that could have been done had funds been available. In three years the Department had run in debt some $32,000, but had not covered near all the work that was waiting to be gifts that they were helping many less fortunate children, and that they were an integral part of the Presbyterian church and its work.

A good collection for the work was given by the adults in the audience given by the adults in the audience at the close of the service. Before the close, the pastor announced that the children who had o generously given up faeir annual xmas tree and treat. Fould have a treat after all—on New Years night—when both the Sabbath Schools of the congregation will unite in St. James' Hall for the usual annual
