The Products Contract.

A favourable feature of the situation in regard to the deliberations on the Newfoundland Products Contract, has been the disposition so far displayed by the parties to the agreement of taking into consideration objections which have been raised to many of its clauses. In a number of cases, the suggestions have already borne fruit, and some new resolutions have been tabled making modifications suggested. There are, however, a number of suggestions which are in our opinion worthy of consideration in the interest of the country.

One of the most objectionable clauses in the agreement is number 20. "Notwithstanding the grant of the water powers heretofore all persons shall have the right to the temporary use of the said waters for the purpose of passing to and fro in small boats, and for the purpose of floating logs and lumber belonging to such persons to their mills, provided that such use shall not seriously interfere with or prejudice the business or operations of the Company."

This clause virtually gives the grantees exclusive control of their waters, for the proviso is so broad and general that the grantees will be able to sustain objections to the ordinary use of the waters by rivermen generally. In the leases of water rights in Canada the position is reversed, and the lessees are not permitted to interfere seriously with other loggers in the use of the streams and they are called upon to make provisions that other loggers may use the streams effectively. Moreover, in the Act of 1904, relating to the Reid grants in regard to water-power, the first clause provided: "It shall be lawful for all persons whomsoever to float saw logs and other timber, rafts and drift over all streams and lakes within the Colony, when necessary for the descent of such logs or other timber." It will be noted that there is no proviso in this clause, that the use shall be TEMPORARY, or that "it shall not interfere seriously or prejudice the business or operations of the Reid Mfg. Co."

Western Fishery.

Up to the end of last week the total catch of cod for the season, between Channel and Port aux Basques, was 2,594 quintals, while for the week alone 60 quintals of cod and 2,500 lbs. of halibut were landed. Two schra. came back from the Banks with 600 quintals, and 5 from the local grounds with 150 qts. Weather conditions have been bad lately, though there is a plentiful supply of bait.

The Army's Cheeriest Officer.

General Whom Kitchener says will Always get a Front Place. The most cheerful officer in the British Army is said to be Lieut. General Sir Henry Rawlinson, who has charge of the Fourth Army Corps in France, and who headed the recent operations that resulted in the taking of the French town of Neuve Chapelle.

He did a lot of good work in the Boer War, and when he left Ladysmith, some one jokingly reported that the troops began to die because they found their lives so dull. Lord Kitchener has a high opinion of his abilities. For instance, when Sir Henry commanded a mobile column which moved about a good deal faster than was appreciated by the Boers, the present Secretary for War declared "his characteristics will always ensure him a front place in whatever he sets his mind to."

Sir Henry Rawlinson has not had the best of good luck in the present campaign. On one or two occasions he has been opposed by superior forces, and has been unable to prevent the Germans from getting large reinforcements. At critical moments he has also had to hold a much larger force than the size of his troops justified, but he has always faced the stubborn situation with characteristic good humor and good temper, and he is as popular as ever.

An Active and Varied Career. He is a son of a baronet who was a famous translator of the Cuneiform inscriptions of Persia and Babylonia, and he has already had an active and varied military career. Commencing with the 60th King's Rifle Corps in 1884 he became aide de camp to Earl Roberts when Commander-in-Chief in India, and later he served with distinction with the mounted infantry throughout the Boer War of 1898-7.

In 1892 he exchanged into the Coldstream Guards and six years later became attached to the staff of Lord Kitchener during the campaign in the Sudan. He has been mentioned no fewer than six times in dispatches and has been awarded the King's and Queen's medals with eight clasps. His favourite amusements are hunting, polo, cricket, rackets and drawing, but he has also published an officers' note-book that is very popular in the service. For some years he acted as commandant of the Staff College, and has also commanded the 2nd Brigade at Aldershot.

He is only fifty years of age and a lot ought to be heard about his prowess and skill before the great war in France is concluded. He is a born leader of men, and when a great move is in contemplation he goes about freely, and inspires his subordinates not only with his own cheery optimism, but also his enthusiasm.

Unpatriotic Employers.

Measures Against Minority-Keeping Men From War Work.
(Daily Mail, April 24.)

The minority of mercenary employers in this district have not yet taken the plain hint that Mr. Asquith gave them in his speech last Tuesday, when he said that the Government would resort to compulsion if necessary.

The North-East Coast Armaments Committee at a full meeting to-day received a statement of the available labour already offered by employers. The total is by no means satisfactory, and the secretary was instructed by unanimous vote to take further steps to induce employers who have not already done so voluntarily to contribute at once the workmen required in the various skilled trades necessary to the production of war munitions.

This means a very energetic canvass of employers in Northumberland and Durham carried out by the organisers by means of the post, telephone, and personal visit. The organisers will be guided by the employers' returns as to the number of men they employ. If necessary these returns can be checked rapidly by the very complete records that are kept by the local trade union officials.

The organisers are very able men, and no doubt will do much by persuasion. I hear of one instance lately where an employer rang up to say he was very, very sorry, but he really could not lend any men. Eventually a persuasive organiser induced him to supply four skilled men.

Still, a drastic example will probably be needed in the end to bring the more mercenary employers to a sense of what must be done. The Government have always the power, they should remember, to seize a particular factory or works, and it might be better for the employer to give men rather than that should happen.

Some employers—for the credit of England I am glad to say they are very, very few—are even ready apparently to induce men to leave Government work for civil work, for two members of the Engineers' Society were specially co-opted by the Committee to-day to prevent piracy of this description.

The Committee also resolved to refer the question of the payment of subsistence and travelling allowances for workmen moved for some distance to new employment on the armament work to the Government Departments concerned—the Admiralty and War Office—and to press for an immediate decision. The Committee is quite convinced that these payments must in fairness be made, but the question is, who shall bear the cost—the Government or the employers?

BANK NOTE TRAGEDY.
In the days when to steal or forge a banknote in England was a crime punishable by death the histories of many notes were tragic in the extreme. The circumstances of one memorable case are peculiarly sad. A young man called Howland was accused by his uncle, a merchant in the city, of stealing a 250 note from the writing tablet in his study. Although it was not proved that the note had ever been in his possession or that it had ever been cashed, the circumstances were considered suspicious enough to justify conviction, and the young man, who was popular and of irreproachable character, was sentenced to death. Some years after his execution the note for which his life was sacrificed was found in a recess in the library chimney, where it is supposed a draft had carried it. London Tit-Bits.

ALIEN ENEMIES WILL BE DETAINED.

LONDON, May 14.

Premier Asquith announced in Commons to-day that all male aliens over military age will be interned. He also said that children in suitable cases will be repatriated, though some may remain. The Government proposes to segregate all adult male enemies of their own safety and for the safety of the country. Announcing the policy of the Government, the Premier said: "At this moment 2,000 unassimilated aliens, of whom 21,000 are men, are at large in this country. The Government consider that all adult males of this class should, for their own safety and the safety of the country, be segregated."

If over military age should be repatriated. The Government recognizes there may be calling for exceptional treatment. Women and children form cases which justice and humanity require that they be allowed to remain. An official body of character will be set up to claim for exemption, and military and naval authorities will provide necessary accommodation for those who have not secured exemption will be interned.
