CHAPTER VI
NEW YORK.

We saw New York under the garb of summer, and also under the mantle of winter. To our party it was a wonder from first to last, and the more we saw of it, the more we wondered. Here was the largest city in the world, and we for a while found ourselves among its eight millions of people. What a sight, or rather, what sights we met at every turn, and what sounds we heard on every side. Looking above us we saw the tall buildings and towering sky-scrapers, as we gazed we noticed the elevated railways, with their long trains and crowded cars. By us on the side-walk passed to and fro the people in their thousands. Beneath us, under the great city, the scene was seemingly more populous; for the subways daily transfer a quarter of a million people. Vast crowds pass at every street crossing, and yet the best of order prevails. "Keep to the right" is the motto, and the result is regularity and safety. In addition to these means of traffic, there are taxi cabs in thousands, and busses in hundreds, and touring cars in scores, and there also remain a goodly number of well groomed horses and comfortable cabs. We were struck with the livery of the men who drive these horses. These men wear long blue brass-buttoned coats, and their head-dress consists of the old-timed heaver hat. As drivers they look very portly, and impressed us as being more like a lot of Bishops than Herry-men. New York can well feel proud of the class of men who cater to the public in this respect; they are among the ruddiest and healthiest lot of people that we saw in our wanderings.

Perhaps, as interesting a sight as visitor to New York, or to any large city, sees, is that of the throng of pedestrians who pass at the street crossings. At each crossing a faithful policeman stands, and with a sort of magic directs the crowd and relieves the congestion. His whistle calls a halt, or announces that the way is clear. With his right hand he beckons one throng, and with his left he directs another. Hundreds of people watch his signal, and scores of Autos and Taxi Cabs abide his mandate. In his position he has absolute authority, and it is backed up by the public, hence the successful regulating of this great traffic, and the protection of all concerned. A blockade, or a tie up in such a city as New York is almost a calamity. This was seen in January last when a heavy snow-fall paralyzed the traffic of the city, and put the street cars and taxis out of commission. For a time the situation was very serious, but like all such emergencies it had to be met and overcome. But it had its lessons, which if learned, should do some good.

To visit New York in the summer season, and to see its grandeur and wealth, one would almost think it impossible for anything to delay its traffic. To see the city at night, one could scarcely dream of darkness, for its thoroughfares are a blaze of light. But great as is the city, and beautiful as are its sights, and systematic as is its traffic, a snow fall of two or three feet, can make all these pay toll. Not often does this happen, and it is well that it does not, but when it does happen, all our invention and all our skill have to take a back seat, and play second fiddle; and we remember that there is a higher power than man's, and greater influences than he controls. Sometimes we forget this; hence a reminder now and then, may be to our benefit.

At the railway stations of the large cities we were pleased to see the agents of the W.C.T.U., and also the Deaconesses, and the Sisters of Mercy, and sometimes the officials of the Salvation Army. These good women do a splendid work in their different spheres, and their presence signifies protection to the stranger, and perhaps discipline for the wayward. Amid the crowd they seemed to stand out in gentle relief; and though silent and unobtrusive, their presence bespoke the dignity of their work. In garb they differ—nor may they agree in Creed; but in the protection of the young, and in the best ideals of morals, they are one. They may not receive the praise of all men, but their service and sacrifice on behalf of others, is their best reward, and their chief ambition. To others they are giving their all; hence their own reward is great, and their peace lasting; for in losing their life they shall in the end find it, "sixty, and a hundred fold."

House of Assembly.

Friday, May 21.
The House met at 3 p.m.
Messrs. Targert and Abbott presented petitions.
The Minister of Finance and Customs introduced a bill respecting the issue of certain Debenture Bonds of the Colony.
The following bills were given third reading: "Of Stipendiary Magistrates and Justices of the Peace," "Of Death Duties," and "Registry of Midwives."
The Fire Patrol Bill was put through the Committee stage.
The House then went into Committee on the fish export regulations.
Hon. W. F. Coaker (G.), read the resolutions passed at yesterday's meeting of the Fish Exporters of the Board of Trade. They contained that which he did not intend to accept, but he would alter the first section, making the Advisory Board consist of seven members instead of five—the Minister, Chairman, four to be appointed by the Governor in Council and two others by the fish exporters. All would have to be bona fide fish exporters.
Sir M. P. Cashin (Leader of the Opposition), agreed with the sections dealing with inspection, scientific research, etc., but the part dealing with the marketing and prices would have his opposition. He was not prepared to hand over the running of the country's fish trade to seven men. The Bill would tend to eliminate the small buyer and seller—the man who so often kept up the price. He heartily supported the idea of having agents abroad. Sir Michael also advocated that there be appointed a Select Committee from both Houses to confer with the exporters for the purpose of accomplishing a compromise.

Mr. M. S. Sullivan (G.) wishes to give Mr. Coaker a chance to see what could be done. He believed that some regulations were necessary.
Mr. S. J. Foote (G.), supported the Regulations in toto. He thought that all opposition to them came from Water Street, which would like to see fish down to what it was in '97.
Mr. J. R. MacDonnell (G.), opposed the Regulations last winter and he had seen nothing since to change his views. Said regulations were illegal in force. In agreement with the member's request, the Minister of Marine and Fisheries altered a clause, so that a man shipping less than 100 qts. would not be subjected to a license fee.
Mr. W. J. Walsh (O.), supported the Regulations in their entirety. To determine what his duty was he had only to take up the afternoon papers and read that the merchants were against the Regulations, and on behalf of the common people he would oppose what the merchants said was best for the country. He was convinced that, to find people who had the good of the fishermen at heart, he would have to go elsewhere than Water Street. He agreed with the suggestion of the Leader of the Opposition that a Select Committee be appointed to consider the matter.
Mr. John Cheeseman (G.), was strongly in favor of the Regulations and was prepared to stand by them. At the meeting in the Board of Trade at which the anti-resolutions were passed, there were only 20 out of 70 exporters of fish. HE HAD EVERY CONFIDENCE IN MR. COAKER AND WAS PREPARED TO TAKE HIS ADVICE.
Mr. C. J. Fox (O.), deprecated the attempt to draw a thick line between the fishermen and the merchant. He objected to restraint of trade and objected to the heading of the Union Trading Co. being head of the Board also.
NIGHT SESSION.
(Mr. Fox resumed)—He did not believe that it was the intention of the Minister to alienate the sympathy of the exporters.
Hon. W. F. Coaker (G.), touching on the opposition levelled at him because of the dual position he held, Minister and Exporter, said that he considered that unless a practical exporter be in charge the Regulations

ATTENTION!

Do you know that about SEVENTY PER CENT. of the coal used in your house is wasted, and that you can prevent a large proportion of waste? Coal is wasted in two ways. It goes up the chimney in smoke and soot. It is left unburnt in the form of cinders. COALOX prevents the escape of smoke, and by providing an additional supply of oxygen burns up most of the soot and cinders.

Persons who have not used Coalox say that it is all very well in theory but it never works out.

LISTEN! One customer who used COALOX regularly during the past six months had the Sweep in the other day. They knew they were getting more heat from the coal used, but they did not know why until then. There was not any soot in the chimney and the Sweep's fee was easy money for him.

YOU TRY IT and find how it will save YOU money.

A can costing $1.20 treats 1 1/2 tons coal. Also in $2.50 sizes.

ROBERT TEMPLETON.

would fail. He wanted to eliminate the evil custom of shipping fish on consignment. If fish was standardized and agents were appointed to the markets it would be easy to regulate prices. Then the fishermen would know what it was to receive the proper price for their fish. At any rate, the Regulations should be given a trial. If they failed they could be withdrawn.

The debate was continued by Messrs. Higgins (O.), Bennett (O.), Vinnicombe (O.), and Warren (G.), and the resolutions were passed with the following amendments:
Section 1 was amended to read as follows:
1. There shall be a Codfish Exportation Board (hereinafter called the Board), which shall consist of seven members, namely, the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, who shall be chairman, four members appointed by the Governor in Council, who shall be licensed exporters of codfish, and two members appointed by a majority of the exporters of codfish holding license hereunder. Failure on the part of the said exporters to nominate or appoint any members of the Board shall not prejudice or invalidate any acts or proceedings of the Board.
Section 4, which provides for a license fee, was amended by the addition of the following:
"Provided that the initial fee of fifty dollars shall not be payable by any fisherman exporter who exports codfish in shipments of less than one hundred quintals each. The Board shall have absolute discretion to determine whether or not any applicant is a fisherman exporter."
A new section, to be number 5, was also added. It reads:—
5—"A meeting of all exporters of codfish shall be convened by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries during the first week in September in each year to consider and discuss with the Codfish Regulations Board all matters relating to the exportation of codfish for the ensuing season. Such meeting shall be held at St. John's and two weeks notice shall be given."
The only other business done was the putting of the Profiteering Bill through committee, after which the House adjourned until Tuesday.

Silver Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard P. Holland, 37 Fresh Water Road, celebrate the silver anniversary of their wedding tomorrow, May 23. Twenty-five years ago they were married at King's Cove, Bonavista Bay, by the Rev. T. U. Lynch, Parish Priest, Mr. Holland then being ship's husband with the firm of Ryan and Co. of that place. The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Holland join in renewing the good wishes expressed at their nuptials and express the hope that they may live to commemorate their golden jubilee.

A MESSAGE TO WOMEN

Who Are Just Ready to Drop
Vinol Will Enrich the Blood and Create Strength.
Physicians Recommend It and Druggists Guarantee It

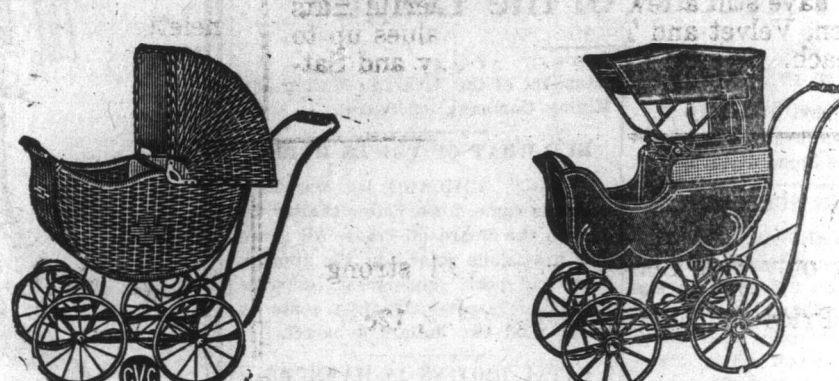

Many women act as though they just wonder how they are going to get through this trying season and do their work. They may be overworked, or influenza or a chronic cold or some sickness has left them without strength or ambition, and thin, nervous and debilitated.

If such women only knew what VINOLA our non-secret cod liver, iron and hypophosphite tonic will do for them we would not be able to get enough to supply the demand.

In a natural manner it creates a hearty appetite, aids digestion, enriches the blood with thousands of red corpuscles, creates strength, and the system is filled with renewed vigor.

Do not let any druggist sell you a substitute for VINOLA, as there is nothing like it, so nothing else will do.

Shabuoth.

Shabuoth, the Feast of Weeks, will be observed in all congregations of the Jewish faith on Sunday, May 23. Orthodox congregations also observe the day following. This festival is one of three agricultural feasts which were observed in the ancient Biblical era. The Feast of Weeks was in Biblical times a farmers' holiday, celebrated at the end of the first seven weeks of harvest. The ceremonial consisted in offerings of the field brought as a thanksgiving token for the new crop that was being harvested. (Deut. xvi:9.)

This feast of the first fruits, like other agricultural festivals, was gradually transformed and invested with symbolic significance. In course of time the Jewish people developed a historical consciousness and linked traditional events with these institutions and festivals that were transmitted from a remoter ancestry. In the case of the Feast of Weeks, the giving of the Decalogue was associated with the feast of the first fruits, and so commemorated until this day.

By this combination a universal significance was attached to the festival in which the ripened fruits of the spirit, instead of the first fruits of the field, were offered in praise and thanksgiving as an offering from the People of the Covenant. All synagogues read the Decalogue on this day and renew their pledge of loyalty to the Covenant of Israel as their fathers did in days of yore.

During the last century the Feast of Weeks was enriched by introducing a confirmation ceremony in connection with its observance. The Confirmation ceremony was sponsored by the leaders of Reform Judaism who made of it a feast of consecration of the Jewish youth, boys and girls, to the ancient covenant of their fathers.

The Confirmation service does not exact from the confirmands any other confession than that of a belief in One God, and in His justice and truth as manifested in history. Confirmation Day in some congregations synchronizes school in which the confirmands have covered an eight-year course comprising Biblical and Jewish History, Jewish Ethics and Literature and an introduction to the Hebrew Language, including a reading knowledge of the Prayer Book in its original language.

Accordeons!

One Gross (144) High Grade to arrive next week. Write or wire at once for prices and descriptions; if ordered, balance won't last long. This is first quantity shipment in 5 years. Late advice from 15 firms in America who we tried for Accordeons says: Impossible to get them, stocks depleted; cannot accept orders as supply will not be sufficient for demand for several months, when prices will be much higher. We are lucky to get this lot, you will be fortunate if you write us today.
