Newfoundland's Loan Taken Up.

Six Million Dollars Added to Public Debt--Germany Will Not Send Arms to Silesia--Twenty Police Defeat Forty Ambushers.

THE LOAN TAKEN UP.
NEW YORK, May 20. It was announced here yesterday by John M. Devine, N.Y. Trade Commissioner here, that bankers and various interests in the United States have taken up the loan of six million dollars just floated by the Newfoundland Government.

VIOLATED ARMISTICE.
PARIS, May 20. Turkish Nationalists have violated the armistice they recently arranged with the commander of the French forces, it is said by the Echo de Paris.

SILESIAN TENSION LESS ACUTE.
PARIS, May 20. Premier Briand of France is opposed to a meeting of the Supreme Allied Council to discuss the Silesian question, until the Inter-Allied Commission in Silesia has reached an agreement and submitted its report. Some of this morning's newspapers declared that Mr. Lloyd George and M. Briand were likely to meet at Boulogne either to-morrow or Sunday. It would appear, however, that M. Briand will not confer with the British Premier until after interpellations of the Government in the Chamber of Deputies are completed and he has secured a vote of confidence. Assurances that Germany would avoid interference in the Silesian plebiscite area and that shipments of arms and ammunition across the Silesian frontier would be stopped, given to the Spanish Ambassador at Berlin by Joseph Wirth, German Chancellor, yesterday, served to decrease the tension over the Silesian situation here to-day.

AMBUSHERS DEFEATED.
GALWAY, May 20. Sixty-armed men ambushed the District Inspector of Constabulary and twenty policemen under him at Westport this morning. One constable was killed and one wounded and four of the ambushing party were killed.

THE UNAPPRECIATED SENSE.
When one thinks of the five senses, one is apt to think of the senses of sight and hearing as the ones that really count, and the other three as of minor importance.

If one had to give up one of the senses, one would be the most likely to give up the sense of smell. And yet in so long I think one would give up more, than one realized.

Both in actual sense pleasure and in the pleasure of associations, it seems to me that the sense of smell has a more direct connection with the subconscious mind than the other senses—that is, we smell less consciously than we see or hear, and consequently a familiar scent brings back deeply buried memories more powerfully than a sight or sound.

The Smell of Wood Smoke.
I was driving the other day down a country lane with a city friend when the clean, acrid, fascinating smell of wood smoke from the chimney of an old farm house struck our nostrils. "How that carries me back to my childhood," he said, closing his eyes the better to shut out the present and savor the past (by the by, have you not noticed how we always shut our eyes and then shut out sight, the keenest and most absorbing of our senses, when we want to concentrate on one of the other senses?) "In my grandfather's home in the country there was never anything but wood fires and even the letters that came from that house had that smell hanging about them."

In Henry Adam's story of his own

"Dead" Man's Acrobatics.

Grand Guignol plays are outdone by a drama enacted at Vilna a few days ago. An inmate of the local asylum died, and the coffin body was taken into the chapel. Another lunatic who had seen the body of his comrade carried away stole into the chapel, took the body from the coffin, and put it in the cupboard used to keep the church furniture. This done, he lay down in the coffin, covered himself with a shroud, and fell asleep. A few hours later a priest arrived and conducted a requiem service. When it was finished bearers lifted the coffin to take away for the burial. The motion woke the madman, who jumped out, struck one and six wounded. The police attacked the ambushers' entrenched position and carried it, and the men defending the position fled across country pursued by the Government forces. Arms, ammunition and bombs were captured from the defeated party.

RESTORING BUILDINGS.
PARIS, May 20. Announcement is made by the Minister of the liberated regions that Germany will soon begin delivery of wooden houses to be erected in the devastated zone of Northern France. Germany will furnish twenty-five thousand of these houses.

CUBAN PRESIDENT.
HAVANA, May 20. Dr. A. Zayas assumed the office of President of Cuba to-day. A cablegram from General Jose Miguel Gomez, his opponent in the bitterly contested election of last November, extended felicitations and promised co-operation.

COL. HARVEY'S ADDRESS.
LONDON, May 20. Commenting on the address, last night, of George Harvey, United States Ambassador to Great Britain, at the dinner given by the Pilgrims, the Daily News, this morning, declared itself perplexed by the United States repudiation of the League of Nations. It inferred from Mr. Harvey's address that the United States actually agree with the objects of the league, but it exclaimed, "yet the United States will have nothing to do with the greatest organization ever created for the fulfillment of the League's high purposes, because her people at last election gave a decisive vote against the party of one of the league's chief founders. Is this the policy of politics?" The Daily Express welcomes especially the ambassador's pronouncement on the League of Nations, which it describes as "the end of an expensive sham."

education by books and by life, there is a fascinating description of the boy's reaction to his surroundings through the various senses. "Among senses, smell was the strongest—small of hot pine woods and sweet fern in the scorching summer noon; of new mown hay; of ploughed earth; of hedges of peaches, lilacs, yarrow; of stables, barns, cowards, of salt water and low tide on the marshes; nothing came amiss. Next to smell came taste."

The Smell of Good Things Baking.
A Letter Friend who evidently is keenly sensitive to the pleasure this sense can give us writes: "I just love the smell of wood burning as one goes along the road and sees the smoke curl up out of the chimney; also tart apples and spice cakes baking at Thanksgiving or Christmas, and oh so many other things."

And another Letter Friend tells how instead of letting her Christmas tree end ignominiously on the dump, she always keeps the branches to burn because she loves the sweet savor of them.

A Confession.

Here's a confession of my own. I call it a confession because so many people have a violent prejudice against perfumes of any sort. I think to have some very delicate, nice, hovering about one is a charm. No one detests cheap perfume more than I. But I cannot believe that the faint elusive scent that comes from having some very delicate sachet lie in the drawer with one's clothes, really offends good taste, and personally I enjoy such a delicate emanation. To select some delicate scent and identify it with oneself, seems to me just as justifiable as to dress oneself with cheap perfume, thus torturing the noses of all around one (alas, we have no noseless!) is unjustifiable.

of the bearers a blow on the head, and ran away. The bearers collapsed and died from fright, while the priest and the others fled panic-stricken. The cries brought a crowd to the chapel entrances. Eventually some

MRS. NANCY WESTCOTT, of Syracuse, N.Y., who declares Tanlac is the greatest medicine on earth. Says it built her up to where she is just brimful of new life and energy.

"I just think Tanlac is the greatest medicine on earth and I can never praise it enough for what it's done for me."
"For two years I was in a badly run-down condition. I had no appetite, and after every meal I would be in awful distress from indigestion and bloating. My nerves were on edge, and I could never get a good night's sleep. I felt tired and 'worn out' all the time, was losing weight, and many times I was so weak I couldn't look after my housework. I just felt miserable."
"Tanalac helped one of my friends so much that I began taking it and it has certainly built me up into splendid health. My appetite is so big I can hardly get enough to eat now, and I am never troubled a particle with bloating or indigestion. My nerves are as steady as clock-work, and I sleep like a child at night. I have recovered my strength and am just brimful of new life and energy. In fact, I feel better than I have in years. My gratitude towards Tanlac is unbounded."
The above statement was recently made by Mrs. Nancy Westcott, 121 Market St., Syracuse, N.Y.

of the bravest ventured inside to ascertain what had happened. They found an empty coffin and a dead man on the floor, and naturally put the corpse into the coffin. They then began to search for the shroud, which the madman had taken away with him. One of the searchers opened the cupboard in the hope of finding something fit to cover the body. Directly he did so the hidden dead man fell on him head first and knocked him down. The live man fainted from fright, and panic again filled the chapel, the crowd rushing out and scattering through the city. It was only after several hours' work by the police that the matter was cleared up and popular excitement subsided.

An Uneasy Exile.

"Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown," and so, too, seems to be the case with Charles, who has been deposed from his throne. Such is the case of Charles, the deposed emperor of Austria-Hungary. The ramshackle empire he inherited from Francis-Joseph, has dissolved. Austria is a small state now, republican in government; the Slav dependencies are independent nations, and Hungary has the separate existence that her people fought for, but did not gain three-quarters of a century ago.

From his safe and very comfortable exile in Switzerland, Charles thought he saw signs that Hungary wished him to return and reign, and so he ventured back on a throne-hunting expedition. He was looking for Austria and Hungary to break their treaty of peace with the Allies, but treaties are no more to Hapsburgs than to Hohenzollerns. However, he did not meet with substantial encouragement, for Hungary was notified by her neighbors that Charles' scheme would not be tolerated.

The deposed emperor, Charles Francis Joseph, was born on August 17, 1887, and is therefore thirty-four years of age. He ascended the throne on November 21, 1916, upon the death of the aged Emperor, Francis Joseph, whose tortuous career culminated in the part he played in setting the world on fire. When Austria collapsed in the autumn of 1918, Charles ignominiously fled from the country.

Chequers Played by Egyptians.

One of the oldest games which we play to-day, is the game of chequers. Thirty-six hundred years ago, the Egyptians played a game along the Nile, that was in all essentials, similar to our game of chequers or draughts. The ancient Greeks also had this game, but with slight variations and through all the intervening centuries it has interested and entertained people. Some now prefer chess, another very old game, claiming that there is more mental work involved; but the game of chequers, simple as it is, presents a demand for the use of mental powers quite equal to those of the average person. That the rules of the game have become very well-established is indicated by the fact that Joshua Sturge's "Guide to the Game of Draughts" which was first published in 1800, is still the standard authority on all points of dispute in the game of chequers as played.
