All Canadians had to mingle together through life in business and other ways, and he urged that all should be governed by a more liberal mind. He stated that certain time should be given in schools for religious instruction, and this should not be crowded out by secular matters. He emphasized particularly the idea that religious and secular matters should not be kept separate in teaching, and said that Christian teachers would do better work than any other on every subject; that they would seek to educate the children, not so much for the earthly gain, but with a higher object. Mr. Dann counseled cheerfulness in teaching, and dwelt on the fact that a successful teacher must be able to please. Miss. E. Johnston, the secretary, hen read the minutes. President Kirk, in his opening address, outlined the growth of memory and the training of the mind. He said that there were 70 per cent idlers among scholars and 30 per cent willing workers, and pointed out that the mind was not nearly so willing to take mental food as was the bedy to take physical food. He spoke about the necessity of good ventilation as favorable to education. Messrs. McQueen and Latta submitted the auditors' report, and Misses Geeson and Cannell presented the report of the delegates to the recent O. E. A. in Toronto. Mr. S. K. LEAVES BY PARACHUTE. Train Doesn't Stop at His Station, Se He Adopts This Device.

Henry Woodward, living near Pine Ridge, Wyo., is engaged in shipping cattle and hogs to Richford. He travat 4:30 p.m. The train does not stop at Pine Ridge, and runs past the station at the rate of 30 miles an hour. Mr. Woodward alights safely from the moving train by means of a parachute. The parachute was made for him in Chicago and measures six feet in diameter when open.

To leave the train Mr. Woodward

nounts a brake wheel and climbs to the roof of a car. He opens his parachute, clings to the rope, and is gently wafted from the roof of the rapidly moving car to the ground.
Sometimes Mr. Woodward jumps into the air with his parachute a little too soon. At other times he is carried somewhat beyond the point at which he wishes to alight. The fact remains, however, that he has never met with any accident when leaving the train in this ingenious manner. The railroad employes have become used to his parachute jump, and are no longer threatened with nervous prostration when he makes it, but the train always contains passengers who have heard of his feat but are skeptical concerning it.—New York World.
