REV. DR. TALLING'S WORK

Former London Pastor an Author-"Extempore Prayer" the Subject.

"Extempore Prayer" by the Rev. Marshall P. Talling, Ph. D., will have a particular interest for a number of Londoners, from the fact that the author was for some seven years pastor of St. James' Presbyterian Church, in this city. In the introduction several reasons are given as evidence that the subject dealt with needs discussion, and while the book will be found lead in public worship. A chapter is devoted to "Free Worship versus Formularies," and the former declared to be the more excellent, and it is concluded that the best method of resisting ritualistic encroachments is the production of an improved free service. Prayer is defined, analyzed, comparison made between public and private prayer, and considerable space given to the necessary preparation, if he who leads the devotions of his fellows is to do so acceptably. The principles which govern true prayer are placed under two heads. The vital spiritual relations existing between God and the worshiper, and the qualities by which a leader is able to influence the worship of his hearers. These are examined in detail. Faults and excellencies are dealt with, and general practical rules given. "The Altar in the Home." "The Prayer Meeting," and "The Power of Prayer" are all given for illustration and as models, some from modern and others from more ancient sources, while a list of authors and sources of prayers as well as a full index are also found. There is abundant testimony of very careful preparation on the part of the author to deal with the subject he has taken in hand, and he seems to have found

IMPORTANT ENTRY ERASED IN A LIVERY ORDERBOOK

Young Woman Saw Gus Ninham Flourish Knife.

Evidence Practically In and Jury Will Probably Find a Verdict Tonight.

Still another session of the longdrawn-out Ninham inquest was held last night at the court house before Coroner Ferguson and his jury, and although the inquest was not con-cluded, the end is now in sight. Of the had seen John McArthur at Sharkey's. although the inquest was not conseven witnesses expected to appear, Witness said he had not. six were on hand, and gave their evidence. An adjournment was made until tonight, and if any evidence is three witnesses at the most. The coroner will then review the evidence, and the jury will be asked to return a verdict in accordance with it.

The former seemed excited, and hesitated at answering apparently simple questions. While the latter, who was one of the party of seven, was decidedly flippant in the manner in which he testified. A young man told of seeing a tall Indian, who he was told afterward was Gus Ninham, fighting with another Indian on Ridout street. The most sensational part of the story was the statement that Ninham drew interposed and struck Ninham a staggering blow. Another interesting orderbook of the livery at which the party of seven secured their rig, the time of their departure has been erased, and a much earlier hour substituted than that fixed by the young men themselves.

The witness who did not appear, Walter Widden by name, is an employe at the livery in question, and his evidence might throw some light on the erasure. Two other possible witnesses, Harry Brown and Walter Cummings, are said to be out of the city. They were with Dean at Sharkey's on the night of the tragedy.

The four of them left the city about 9 o'clock, drove to Springbank, watched the variety performance for a while, drove around the grounds and then drove towards Sharkey's. It was nearly 11 o'clock when they left Springbank and nearly all the crowd had gone. They passed several people on the road while driving to Sharkey's. Arrived there, all four got out, went into the hall, then into the parlor for two or three minutes, then through the kitchen into the sittingroom behind the bar. The witness saw no profitable to all godly people, it has its especial message for those who one at the hotel when they arrived except Hugh Sharkey. A few minutes before they left another crowd, apparently of three or four persons at least, came in, but witness did not see any of them save one who opened the door and put his head in. Brown said "Good night" to this man.

Witness thought his party was in the hotel only about 20 minutes, because they had just two drinks and then went home. While they were in the house, the Gladstone was put in were hired at Stroyan's. Sharkey was with the party only about five minutes, brought in the drinks. Witness and his party had had but two rounds of drinks before the other party came, and none afterwards. On leaving, witness' party went out the side door, opening to the west side of the house. Sharkey said the INSPECTOR MIGHT BE ALONG and they had better go out that way. There was no light in the bar and witness did not see into it. Sharkey told the party it was 11:30 and time to close up, and they accordingly left in three or four minutes. The other party came in between the time Sharkey told them it was 11:30 and the time they left. All of witness' party went to the shed to get their Witness noticed no persons outside the hotel when they left. They drove east on the Pipe Line road, over the York street bridge, and up Richmond street to Dundas. It was 12:05 by the G. T. R. clock when the party reached the corner. Wm. Quick Spent Several Hours at Hote on Fatal Night.

Wm. Quick, of Bruce street, South London, next took the stand. He had to be twice admonished by the coroner, once for refusing to answer proper questions, and once for jumping at questions before they were asked. He had been at Sharkey's on the night of June 21, he said, going there at 8:50 with Abel. He stayed there till about 11:20 or 11:30.
