Guessing At Roberts' Tactics

London Reviewer Concludes That Buller Is Left to His Own Resources.

Though Not Relieving Ladysmith Holding Boers for Roberts' Advance.

By Associated Press.

London, Jan. 31.—Mr. Spencer Wilkinson, reviewing the military situation in the Morning Post says: "There is again a remarkable scarcity of information about what is taking place in the theatre of war. There must be more than a hundred war correspondents at the front, but they are kept silent."

"The column under General Kelly-Kenny has occupied Thebus, a point about thirty miles by railway from Ladysmith, where General French is operating, and about 45 miles from Stormberg Junction, where the Boers opposed to General Gatacre are believed to be. The strength of General Kelly-Kenny's column is not told, but as that officer commands the Sixth division, the whole of which has reached Capetown, it is not unreasonable to suppose that it is not less than 10,000 men. It is a strong enough for independent operations, portends a great deal. In the first place, it means that the campaign in Natal is to take care of itself, for if the Sixth division is at Thebus, there is no other force at Capetown capable of turning the balance in Natal."

Ladysmith, then, is not to be relieved. Its garrison must hold out as long as it is possible or make a desperate attempt to fight its way out. Indeed, General Buller, with such forces as he has, has a third time to drive back the Boer army. This decision implies that the war will be prolonged and that the Boers are to be given time to push their campaign in Natal. They will try to overcome Sir George White's force and to take the offensive against General Buller, who is sent to the assistance of French who has hemmed a force of Boers, but finds them reinforced from the north. Anything like a division added to General French's force ought to enable him to destroy the forces with which he is dealing, completing his circle around them, and then gradually closing in upon them."

"The formation of a British column while this kind of concentration was possible, looks like a continuance of the old policy of dispersion, instead of concentration. General Kelly-Kenny will have to abandon the railway bridge at Steynburg as he moves eastward, and as his advance continues he will enter a hilly, perhaps difficult country."

AN OFFER FROM MONTANA. Welshman's Patriotism Aroused by South African Trouble—Would Join the Western Contingent.

In the legislature on Tuesday, Col. Baker asked for the indulgence of the house while he read a letter indicative of the patriotism which existed among British subjects in all parts of the world and especially on this continent. "It is really worth reading to the house," he said, "because it makes us proud of our nation." The correspondence follows:

"Col. Baker: 'Port Gaitchon, Jan. 29th, 1900. 'Dear Sir: I am anxious to do all in my power to forward the views of Mr. Hughes, a copy of whose letter, which will explain to me, I enclose. I may say that he is a Welshman, about 30 years of age, and left his employment in Manitoba to go to Montana a few years ago, where he has been ever since. He is a man of great energy and is in the cattle and mail-running business ever since. I know him to be a thoroughly honorable

Liberals to Press This Session Their Attack on Canadian Senate.

Redistribution Again Offered for Rejection—Other Features of Speech.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Ottawa, Jan. 31.—The finishing touches were put to the speech from the throne today. The parliamentary bill of fare is of the baldest character. There will be reference to prosperity of the country as evidenced by the trade and revenue returns. Naturally the war in South Africa will be mentioned and reference made to the fact that the colonies have shown their sympathies with the motherland by contribution of troops. The census will be alluded to. Among the bills promised by the government are measures to amend and revise the criminal code, and to amend the banking and franchise acts.
