

The Weekly Monitor.

BRIDGETOWN, MARCH 5, 1879.

THE LOCAL LEGISLATURE.

A session of our Provincial Parliament will open to-morrow. We have scarcely an inkling of what policy will be propounded by the new Administration, or what measures will be submitted for legislative action; nor is it probable that the Lieutenant Governor's opening speech will make the public much wiser as respects the prospective developments of the Session. Such sub-rosa addresses have become proverbial for the meagreness of substantial executive information. Some years ago it was said by a cynical English politician that "a speech from the Throne was more designed to conceal the policy of a Government than to conceal it."

The social at Mr. Walter Saunders on Tuesday evening, of last week, was the most largely attended of any given this season. The proceeds amounted to $36.38.

MARGARETVILLE.—"The storm of 20th and 21st inst.," says our correspondent, "is said to be the most terrific known in Margaretville for forty years. Caused some damage to the pier. No damage to shipping."

The race spoken of in last week's Monitor, took place on the river here Saturday, did not take place, owing to the parties being unable to come to a satisfactory understanding. We understood that the race was arranged when we inserted the paragraph in reference to it in our last issue.

The classes in the High School, Lawrenceton, will be examined on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday—March 10th, 11th, 12th. On Wednesday the classes will be examined orally; on Wednesday evening the exercises will consist of essays by the middle class, and instrumental music by the music class.

ARRIVED.—The barquentine "Geo. E. Corbit," Capt. Kenneth Atwood, arrived at Annapolis on Sunday, from Glasgow, after a very rough passage. One of the seamen, named Patrick Bristol, of St. John, N. B., fell from the foremast into the water, and was drowned. The accident happened during a gale, rendering it impossible to save him.

The "G. E. C." will be ready for cargo about the 15th inst., or as soon as the weather is fit. All parties that intend shipping apply by this vessel can, therefore, govern themselves accordingly.

NAPLES.—Below we give some extracts taken from a letter by Mr. F. Bristow, professor of music, now living in Naples, Ont., to a friend in this town. It will probably be read with interest by many, as Mr. Bristow made many friends here.

According to a promise made on or about the 6th of January, 1878, I set down what I heard from full of good intentions as regards writing a letter to you, and which I intended to send you some time ago, and which I have now at last written and send you as you see. Since I have been here I have been on the "round jump," (excuse my slang) being around from east to west and north to south, almost to the North Pole I might say, and with correspondence and visitors calling upon me. I have not had a day to call my own, and I am obliged to take Sunday for correspondence, etc. I have just arrived from church and a missionary meeting. We had 35 minutes sermon from our venerable pastor and prayers of lengthy duration; so much so that I felt in a very nervous frame of mind and really at a hard matter to think of any news relating to worldly affairs. We have a very nice town here, population about 4,000, and I was surprised to find that there are but entirely brick buildings (no wooden buildings) and some of the stores are finer and better than any I have ever seen in Hall's or St. John, and the trade is being done here too, especially in the produce line. I attended market the other day and counted 45 loads of winter wheat, and any quantity of butter and cheese in sleigh loads. There is a fine market-building here for purpose for farmers to bring their goods to sell in, as it is too cold for them to stay outside. I was told by the custom's officer here that there were 600,000 bushels of barley alone shipped to the United States last fall, besides other cereals. Young ladies are also plentiful and in great variety too. I have at present 15 under my charge, and expect to have my hands full in a short time. I have had a little news from Bridgetown lately, and I am glad to hear that you are all alive and well. After that first-class snow-oom we have plenty of good snow and good sleighing all the time on the river and roads, and fine skating on the river. We have three weekly papers here, and all are well patronized. There is a circulating library here, and several good institutions. We have very fine churches here, four stone and one handsome brick church. The Church of England is a large church, cost $30,000, and has fine stained glass windows, &c. The church I am engaged at is a fine church, built of stone and with beautifully painted ceilings, and a beautiful organ. My choir is improving, and I intend it to be one of the best in a short time. The people here are very kind, and I have had a very pleasant time since my arrival. We have a carnival on the ice and a dance in the town hall every week. The weather has been glorious since I have been here, and though averaging 7 to 12 below zero, there is hardly any wind, and I don't feel the cold as much here as in Nova Scotia. We have seven first-class hotels here, and four or five livery stables. The beauty of this place is there are so many large towns in every direction, and so close together, with population as far north as Serepukhoi. It first began to declare itself in December, 1770; but it was for some time ignored or denied. The Emperor Catherine II. writing to her son that if any one said there was a plague in Moscow he lied; nothing but fever was to be feared. But, after being kept under by the water's frost and officially protested against during the summer, the pest burst forth in the autumn with a fury which even ukases could not control. By the middle of September, 1771, the condition of Moscow was terrible. From 800 to 1,000 deaths took place every day. The upper classes fled from the plague-stricken town, and the poor saw look to rioting. On the 16th (27th) of September broke out what is generally known as the "tombay hunt" or plague riots. The populace assembled in crowds before one of the gates of the Kremlin, wishing to avail themselves of the good offices of the Bogolyubof miraculous Madonna. The Archbishop Zakharennyy prudently ordered the picture removed from its usual locality to a more open spot, in order to avoid the danger likely to arise from their thronging together of so many plague-fearing worshippers. A cry was raised that he was stealing the holy portrait, and that he must therefore be put to death. He fled in disguise from the Kremlin, taking with him a young boy, who was stealing the holy portrait, and that he must therefore be put to death. He fled in disguise from the Kremlin, taking with him a young boy, who was stealing the holy portrait, and that he must therefore be put to death.

WHAT A LADY PEDESTRIAN OF 18 PROPOSES. The feat of walking 3,000 quarter miles in as many consecutive quarter hours, proposed by Miss Reynolds, Boston, is attracting attention among the students of physical and mental endurance. Miss Reynolds began her work at Revere Hall, on the corner of the North and Green streets, at 6 o'clock on Monday evening. A reporter interviewed her at that hall, and, notwithstanding she was just after completing a six-day walk, she is found to be her bright and vivacious. She is about 18 years old, 5 feet 5 inches in height, and weighs 150 pounds. She was armed in a short walking dress, a jacket, and a walking jacket, and wore her raven black hair parted over her forehead. She is the daughter of a respectable and well-to-do family in Troy, N. Y., and took to her profession about a year ago, for the pure love of the exercise, which, to her, she considers but simple sport. Her legs are very strong, and she had them trained to walk, and she had them done up in bandages. In answer to queries made by the reporter, she said she had been in the habit of walking in completing 1,500 quarter miles in 1,500 quarter hours recently, and had the greatest confidence in her ability to complete the feat. She said that her great trouble at first would be to avoid swollen feet, and, after the first five days, she would sadly feel the heat of the sun. She was sorry that she could not have hired Miss or Horticultural Hall for her walk, but yet thought the people of the "Habit" would be glad to see her.

NEWFOUNDLAND. The steamer Newfoundland which arrived on Saturday from St. John's brought a month's papers.

FROZEN TO DEATH. A poor woman named Joanna Wickham lost her life in a dreadful snow storm on the night of the 10th inst. She lived with her husband on the Freshwater Road. On her way home she called at Mr. Patrick Cramp's. Mrs. Cramp wanted her to stay the night but she would persist in going home to her husband, as she had some provisions for him. Mrs. Cramp gave her a shawl. Next morning she was found frozen to death at the corner of Cramp's fence about a half mile from her own home.

ANOTHER TRAGIC DEATH. A man named John D'Arcy came to his death at Bett's Cove, in a shocking manner. He had been complaining of pains in the region of the back and beneath the ribs, and was unable to get up. He got a large quantity of flannel, saturated with spirits of turpentine, and saw it around his body. Desiring to loosen the bandage, and having noticed that it was burning his person fearfully, he ran out in the snow and rolled himself to extinguish the flames. He was so badly injured that death followed in a few hours.

THE PLAGUE IN RUSSIA IN THE LAST CENTURY. The appearance of the plague in the Astrachan Government has revived the memory of the terrible outbreak in Moscow during part of the years 1770 and 1771. Its first victims were the soldiers whom shot and steel had spared during the war waged against Turkey. It then made its way into Russia from the south-west, extending as far north as Serepukhoi. It first began to declare itself in December, 1770; but it was for some time ignored or denied. The Emperor Catherine II. writing to her son that if any one said there was a plague in Moscow he lied; nothing but

PERILS OF THE SEA.

WARRIMORO, Feb. 28.—The signal corps observed at Barnegat, N. J. reports that the schooner David H. Tolck came ashore about 3 a. m., six miles south of the station, and the sea being very heavy, commenced to break up rapidly. The hatch and other pieces of deck furniture and women's clothes were picked up near the station as early as 11 a. m. Her crew of eleven in number, including a woman and child, took refuge in the rigging, and the crew of the crew of Station 18, rigged up the breeches buoy, in which one man and a young child were brought ashore, but in an exhausted condition. The crew of Station 17 started for the wreck at 4 p. m., and after their arrival four of the vessel's crew were landed in a dying, almost hopeless condition, making the number saved six. Two, while being drawn ashore in the breeches buoy, were drowned. The Captain's wife died in the rigging, one man was washed overboard at noon, and the rest, if not dead, supposed to be in a dying condition, are still on board. Four lines were shot out to the vessel, but could not be brought back to their fellow workmen. The strong current in the beach. The surf boat was tried twice without success, and the keeper of Station 19 was thrown overboard and badly hurt.

Some of the innumerable strikes that have lately taken place in Britain have been the means of teaching the strikers important lessons. Here is one case: The strikers engaged in the Warrington iron trade went on a strike instead of submitting to a reduction in wages. Thereupon one of the iron masters sent at his own expense three of the strikers to Germany to learn by what means the German iron manufacturers were enabled to keep their works going during the strike. The strikers returned with British manufacturers in their own markets. The deputation on reaching Germany, soon had their eyes opened, and they returned home with a new determination. The strikers were full three hours longer than that of the English workers. Meditation on these facts quickly brought the strike to an end.

In my family, and for the stock, I have had a great deal of trouble. I am surprised at the many different maladies in which it is applicable. It gives the utmost satisfaction. Superintendent, Eastern Pennsylvania Experimental farm.
