PEN AND INK PIRATES.
Literary Theft Is Not Stealing; It Is Called Genius.
All authors steal. The capacity for stealing with art and elegance is one of the most potent equipments of the literary man.
Shakespeare was a magnificent thief. He stole whatever he could lay his hands on in a literary way and never marred in the stealing. He stole "Measure For Measure" from a play called "From a Play by Cassiodorus." He stole "Hamlet" from a play by George Kyd. "Romeo and Juliet" he stole from Italy.
Sir Walter Scott stole with a sublime taste. He stole French antiquarian records. He stole from Goethe. He stole from Sheridan.
Charles Reade claimed the right of the literary artist to set jewels, even about the gems are the property of another.
Alexandre Dumas, the author of "The Three Musketeers" and "Monte Cristo" was one of the most remarkable thieves in literature. In one single year his name was attached to no fewer than forty different books. Not only did he steal unashingly from every author who came handy, but he employed other literary ghosts and passed off their work as his own.
Brought to book, he had a ready reply. "The man of genius does not steal," he said; "he only conquers." Alexander Pope, who translated thousands of pounds by his poetic translation of Homer's "Iliad," was an indifferent Greek scholar. In addition to stealing from previous translators, he employed others to help and then claimed the whole work as his own.
When he translated "The Odyssey" he kept the public in ignorance that only twelve books could be called his and that the rest were the work of men whom he paid badly.
The arguments in Pope's "Essay on Man" were furnished by Lord Bolingbroke, and his "Essay on Criticism" was a poetic version of the conversation of his intimates.
Richard Dimsley Sheridan, wit, dramatist and politician, stole his famous characters Charles Surface and Joseph Surface in "The School for Scandal" from Tom Jones and Bill in Fielding's well known novel, and he adapted Tadhtha Bramble and Sir Robert MacRillig and transformed them into those still more entertaining characters Mrs. Malaprop and Sir Lucius O'Trigger in "The Rivals."
Of modern authors who stole and are stealing still the present writer does not say a word. Only history can afford to be free spoken.—Exchange.

Word Painting.
Mrs. Bradley, when questioned by a fellow traveler in the Pullman car in regard to her home, launched forth into a rather long and detailed description of its charms. Her little girl, Grace, who had been reading when she began to speak, soon closed her book and listened with great interest.
"It must be very pleasant," remarked the chance acquaintance, somewhat perfectly, when Mrs. Bradley finished, and Grace, her eyes gleaming with enthusiasm, said: "Oh, it must be perfectly lovely! What place is it, mamma?"
"Why, our own home, of course," answered the mother, somewhat embarrassed.
"Oh, dear," said Grace, sighing, "how much better it sounds than it looks!"

Need and Needs.
Perhaps many persons have wondered why we are taught to say "He need not do that" instead of "He needs not do that," as the singular pronoun, he, requires under ordinary conditions the singular form of the verb. The reason is that in a sentence of that kind, a negative sentence, expressing requirement or obligation, "need" becomes an auxiliary and takes no change of termination in the third person singular. This exception is laid down in the grammar.
The Iron Crown.
The iron crown of Lombardy, so called from the narrow iron band within it supposed to have been beaten out of one of the nails used at the crucifixion, was probably first worn by Agilolph at his coronation in 591. The historic crown after gracing the brows of such sovereigns as Charlemagne, Henry of Luxemburg, Frederick IV, Charles V, and the great Napoleon was in 1806 given up to Victor Emmanuel and is now preserved with great care at Monza, near Milan.
Extravagance.
"This is your little sister, Tommy," said the father, showing him the baby.
"You will love her dearly, will you not?"
"Yes, of course," replied Tommy, inspecting the latest arrival, "but it'll cost a great deal to keep her, won't it?"
"I presume so."
"Yes," said Tommy, with a long drawn breath, "and when I asked you the other day to buy me a white rabbit you said you couldn't afford it!"
This Is a Fact.
"When a man loves a girl in a novel he raves about her through forty chapters. In real life he never mentions her name."
"What's the application?"
"Merely that realism in a love story is not possible."
Still Faithful.
Mlle. Suzanne—is that young man still under the window? Maid—Well, mademoiselle, he's running round in the snow to keep himself warm, but he goes in the shape of a heart all the time.—Bon Vivant.

Going to law is losing a cow for the sake of a cat.—Chinese Proverb.
