

Information Management and Technology

Information management and technology are critical to the successful achievement of the Department of Foreign Affairs and International Trade's objective of serving Canadian interests abroad. The Information Management and Technology Bureau is responsible for providing technology and information services to over 7 000 employees at departmental headquarters in Ottawa and at 150 embassies and consulates around the world. Our award-winning applications have made the Department's sophisticated network the envy of the G-8.

Canada and Peacekeeping

Over the past 50 years, peacekeeping has become synonymous with Canadian foreign policy. Traditionally involving the military, Canadian participation in peacekeeping now includes police, humanitarian agencies and election officials. Come and see how peacekeeping has changed over the years, meet peacekeepers and learn about the Department's role in peacekeeping.

Canada's Cultural Portrait Abroad

The Arts and Cultural Industries Promotion Division promotes Canadian culture abroad through financial support assisting Canadian artists to present themselves to foreign audiences. Each year hundreds of cultural events take place in many countries around the world, showcasing Canadian creativity and innovation. The Division also promotes the export of Canadian cultural products and services, introducing new exporters to the international market and contributing to the growth and creation of jobs in this rapidly expanding sector.
