CANADA—UNITED KINGDOM TALKS ON SOCIAL SECURITY

Question No. 1,682—Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich):

1. Did talks between the British and Canadian authorities take place last April on a reciprocal agreement between the two countries on social security and, if so, what progress can be reported on these talks?

2. (a) In what areas, e.g. pension payments, medical benefits or whatever, is there disagreement still to be resolved (b) for what reason are these talks so protracted?

3. Is there a date fixed on which talks are to be resumed and, if so, what is that date?

4. Is the scheme for Canada to assume payments in Canada for British pensioners and Britain to assume payments in Britain for Canadian pensioners, or will each country continue to look after its own migrant pensioners?

Mr. Herb Breau (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State for External Affairs): 1. Late in March, 1974, the deputy minister of National Welfare had conversations with British officials in London covering the British

[Mr. Sharp.]

Green Paper on tax credits as well as social security relationships and developments in the two countries. While better understanding was achieved as to the internal workings of the two systems, it also became clear that the current state of legislation in the two countries precludes the reaching of a reciprocal agreement at this time.

2. (a) and (b). At this stage, the problem in reaching a bilateral reciprocal agreement does not lie with different types of benefits but rather the different provisions of the legislation in the two countries.

3. No date has been fixed for further conversations.

4. As noted in (2) above, the different provisions of legislation in the two countries will require examination of a variety of possibilities.

FISHERMEN—LICENSING PROGRAMME

Question No. 1,782—Mr. Marshall:

With reference to the licensing programme under the Department of the Environment, what are the names of all bona fide fishermen in the following communities in St. George's Bay, Western Newfoundland (a) Codroy (b) Highlands (c) St. David's (d) Jeffreys (e) McKays (f) Robinsons (g) Heatherton (h) St. Theresa's (i) Flat Bay (j) St. George's (k) Barachois Brook (l) Stephenville Crossing (m) Stephenville (n) Port au Port (o) Felix Cove (p) Campbell's Creek (q) Abraham's Cove (r) Ship Cove (s) Lower Cove (t) Sheaves Cove (u) Marches Point (v) Red Brook (w) Degras (x) Cape St. George (y) Mainland (z) Three Rock Cove (aa) Lourdes (bb) Winterhouses (cc) Black Duck Brook (dd) West Bay (ee) Piccadilly (ff) Boswarlos (gg) Point au Mal (hh) Aguathuna (ii) Fox Island River?

Mr. Len Marchand (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of the Environment): It is a long-standing departmental policy not to divulge information, concerning individual persons and companies, which has been obtained in confidence for statistical and management purposes. To do so could seriously undermine the department's statistical system by casting doubt on the department's credibility in its assurances to fishermen and processors that all information secured from them is maintained in the strictest of confidence.

CANADA-UNITED STATES SALMON NEGOTIATIONS

Question No. 1,801—Mr. Reynolds:

1. What is the scheduled date for the start of Canada-US Salmon negotiations?

2. How long does the government expect such negotiations to last?

3. How many fishermen in the Province of British Columbia will take part in the negotiations?

4. What are the names, departments and addresses of the members of the official Canadian delegation?

Mr. Len Marchand (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of the Environment): 1. The starting date for the next round in the Canada/USA salmon negotiations has tentatively been set at May 28, 1975.

2. It is expected that these talks will last for seven to ten days, depending upon the progress made towards reaching an agreement.

3. Ten commercial fishermen or representatives of commercial fishermen, two representatives of sport fishermen and two representatives of fish buyers and processors will
