THE DAILY HINT FROM PARIS

The mother's milk is the only food that was ever meant for a baby during his first year. And any other food is a poor substitute. Therefore it is very necessary that the young mother guard carefully her own health that she may be well and strong for her baby's sake.

She should keep good hours and get plenty of sleep. That is where the value of good training comes in. It is possible for the mother to get a full night's rest. Walk a little farther each day, being careful to stop just short of the tired point.

Nervous mothers are not good nurses. Mothers so constituted should try to overcome any nervous, worrying habits, and make every effort to lead quiet, restful lives.

I have already spoken of the much-needed daytime nap. That breaks the tension of a long day, and freshens the mother wonderfully.

The nursing mother's diet is very much discussed. Everybody knows whether advises her to eat this, or not on any account to touch that. Until it is very doubtful if either baby or mother is getting much nourishment, if all the advice were followed.

A safe, general rule is, eat the food to which you have been accustomed, if it agrees with you, and avoid all excesses in eating. Fish occasionally is good, and meat once a day, plenty of fruits, vegetables, eggs, cereals and fluids. The fluids are preferably green, milk and cocoa, rather than tea, coffee, or other stimulants.

Four things are not necessarily harmful, except when taken in large quantities: Alcohol, tobacco, stimulants, and the diet should be general, avoiding monotony and including the various kinds of food. It should also be generous in eating. The diet should be sufficient, but many women feel the need of something between meals. This is all right, so long as it does not take the appetite away from the regular meals. I think it very advisable to give the nursing baby a bottle or two every day. Then the mother can get away for the change and rest, which she certainly needs and generally longs for. Then, too, it is well to accustom the baby to taking his food from the bottle.

ART IN PIANO BUILDING.
The art series of upright pianos, built by the old firm of Heintzman & Co., Ltd., 132, 135, 137 Yonge street, is commanding wide attention among people of refined taste. In some eight or ten different styles of cases they represent as many varying styles of architecture, meeting a variety of tastes. Take the Louis "C," a very beautiful upright piano, reflecting the ruling tastes of the days of Louis XV. This piano is built of fancy mahogany, with lines and scrolls of most artistic character. Heintzman & Co. are inviting attention to an exhibit of these art pianos now being made in their warehouses, Yonge street.

John D. Bell

When John D. Bell

D'you think he asks

of anyone?

Oh, no! He orders

With "Get my hat!"

or, "Tie my shoe!"

The Goops all say

But you, of course,

say, "If you please!"

Don't Be A Goop!
