dispensation. No, but in that single death he saw many. In the weeping mourners around his eye beheld all the woe and desolation which sin and death had brought into this fair world; and then that large heart of his was melted—"he groaned in the spirit and was troubled." This one recent grave may so lead us back to many a mouldering heap around it.

"The air is full of farewells to the dying
And mournings for the dead."

We have been like the apostle "in deaths oft." It is not forbidden to call up the terms of the departed, although like Samuel to the unhappy king of Israel they came to tell us that we must soon be with them. The sorrow is salutary

O, let the soul her slumbers break,
And thought be quickened and awake;
Awake to see
How soon this life is gone and past;
How death comes softly stealing on,
How silently.

Our lives are rivers gliding free
To that unfathomed boundless sea.
The silent grave.
Thither all earthly pomp and boast
Roll, to be swallowed up and lost
In one dark wave."
