

CONTENTS.

XV

Great rising in North Carolina	PAGE 390
Georgia ready for independence and self-government	391

CHAPTER XXV.

HOW SOUTH CAROLINA ADVANCED TO INDEPENDENCE.

February-July 1776.

The convention of South Carolina	393
South Carolina establishes its own constitution	394
John Rutledge is chosen and inaugurated president. His address	395
Speech of the chief justice on opening the court	396
The British fleet enter Cape Fear river	397
Burning of Hooper's house. First expedition of Cornwallis	398
Rutledge in Charleston prepares to meet the British	398
Arrival and opinions of General Lee	399
He proposes the evacuation of Sullivan's Island	400
The British army lands on Long Island	401
Preparations of each side for battle	402
Description of Fort Moultrie	403
The British begin the attack	404
The advance party of the Americans receive no damage	405
British vessels of war ground. Heroism of Jasper and Macdaniel	406
Effect of the American fire on the British flag-ship	407
Retreat of the British	408
Losses of the British	409
Honors to the defenders of Fort Moultrie	410
News of the victory are sped to the North	411

CHAPTER XXVI.

VIRGINIA PROCLAIMS THE RIGHTS OF MAN AND PROPOSES INDEPENDENCE.

May-June 1776.

The constituent convention of Virginia	412
The people of Virginia unanimous	413
Edmund Pendleton chosen president of the convention	414
They resolve on independence and a confederation	415
George Mason drafts the declaration of rights. Madison's amendment	416
The rights of man as declared by Virginia	417
The independent policy of Maryland	419
The proprietary government in Pennsylvania overthrown	420
The position of Dickinson	421
The irresolution of the assembly of Pennsylvania	422
Richard Henry Lee offers the resolution for independence	423
He is supported by John Adams	424
The desire of the court of Vienna	424
Committees to prepare a declaration of independence	425
To digest the form of a confederation	425