Never

Our buyers are still hard at it—they never sleep. Results are showing in arrivals of new goods, creating anxiety to clear quickly everything in the way of summer goods. Ordinary dealers find it hard to realize that goods in such heavy quantities can be bought by any one store. The recent purchase of wash fabrics is a case in point, having set the trade of city and country talking-a million and a half yards. The explanation is in the facilities we have for disposing of the largest lots of goods. No quantity, if goods are right and prices are right, is too large for the store's outlet.
