The men of both these units described the welcome given them in Montreal and Toronto respectively as being among the was more than sufficient to accom-

A few went to western points on the same train that brought them to London, and a few others went to Tecumseh Barracks, intending to catch trains later in the day to points outside the city. Although these men returned with units proceeding for dispersal to eastern points, they were not discharged.

A Londoner in the party was Stanley Mitchell, who went overseas with the 135th Battalion and went almost directly to France with the 49th Highlanders. He saw a great deal of the severe fighting during the last three years of the war, and escaped without a wound, although he suffered an attack of trench fever. Prior to enlisting, he was employed by the Ontario Furniture Company.
