The officers halted the Chinamen and revolver. one of them, Young Ling, who spoke English fluently, told the policemen they had just arrived in Buffalo from Detroit, where they had been engaged in the laundry business. Sergt. Then suspected that all was not right and calling a patrol wagon he sent the Chinamen to the police station.

Young Ling was put thru a rigid examination and it is said finally admitted that he and his companions had smuggled into this country Fri-He said they had come across Canada from the Pacific slope and had lived in Toronto for several months. Only a few weeks ago they opened negotiations with men in Buffalo who agreed to get them across the border. The trip was planned for Friday evening. They went to a small town, the name of which Young Ling could not remember, and there they placed in a motorboat brought to the American shore. They were sent into South Buffalo where they met another man who was to conduct them to a place of hiding. They missed the man and spent their time wandering about the streets."

The Chinamen will be turned over to the federal authorities.
