WORK OF SOLDIERS SURPRISES VISITORS

Men Who Have Served Empire on Battlefield Have Fine Exhibit.

Work done by soldiers in hospitals is one of the most surprising things to be seen at the Exhibition. In a corner of the women's building a large case is filled with specimens, almost all of which are done in such perfect style that it is a marvel how fingers which had not been accustomed to such occupation could ever evolve the products which are shown.

A scarf knitted by Lance-Corporal G. E. Brunter in blue and white wool and in two different stitches is beautiful in the regularity of workmanship. A cushion in cross stitch showing the flags of the allies is the work of Pte. Westwood, of the 14th Battalion, now at 558 Spadina avenue A painting and a tray are all by the same soldier, who has both legs paralyzed. A small quilt crocheted by Driver H. Wilson, of the 18th Battalion, is a marvel of uniformity of work, of which the intricate pattern is no small feature.

A variety of articles, including bags made from cord and lined with silk, woolen caps, mats, and many other exhibits of the handiwork of the men who have fought for the empire, are worthy of the admiration they are receiving, and should be seen by every visitor to the fair.
