Miscellaneous. IMPLORA PACE. BY E. B. THATCHER.

In a graveyard at Bologna, Lord Byron found the tomb of a beautiful Princess, who died at the age of twenty...

Give room! give room! to the dead! No other place have they Whom I feel the aching head...

The wild deer hath his resting place, And all the weary wings, the sea And the wide skies that roam...

Give room, give room! for I have been Leta's wilderness all o'er, Praying for that sweet eve to fall...

For rest! for rest! I would not see The sun, nor breathe the air; Vision nor voice should come to me...

For rest! for rest! I have grown old, And dreamt of love and love, Till earth was like a garden...

For rest! for rest! I will not weep for those That have their body peace— Beneath the flowers and dews, in din...

No, I'll go to my side, ye loved, Ye last, yet once again, To bear no more what I have borne...

For rest! for rest! give me room, And give me rest, 'till the tomb!

THE BABY. O how the baby along, by all means, At his mother's side, in the car, and toddle about...

In old times when they used to journey in coaches, a lady who had a very little child with her...

How babies and butterflies do swarm in snatches of light and shade, in the little world of the infant!

THE GIRLS OF KAMAYE. A correspondent of the London Daily News writes from Bombay...

Why a Bachelor Don't Marry. I recently read a newspaper philippic against matrimony...

Mr. Kenyon's death by cholera occurred a few days since at Cambridge. A lady was attacked with the cholera, and apparently died...

A MISERABLE CHILD. I said that Kenyon died of eating apples; and it is true that he died of eating apples...

THE IMPRISONED. When the Rev. Mr. Kenyon died a middle-aged man, I saw some news that he was in the hands of the government...
