FAMOUS GEMS OF PROSE

THE MYSTERIES By James Hunt Cook

HE early sunlight filtered through the filmy draperies to where a wandering baby stretched his dimpled hands to catch the rays that lit his face and flesh like dawn lights up a rose. His startled gaze caught and held the dawn of day in rapturous looks that spoke the dawn of Self, for with the morning gleam out came the greater wonder. It was the mystery of Life. Across a cradle where, sunk in satin pillows, lay a still, pale form as droops a rose from some fierce heat, the evening shadows fell aslant and spoke of peace. The twilight calm enclosed the world in silence deep as truth, and on the little face the wondering look had given place to one of sweet repose. It was the mystery of Death. At head and foot the tapers burned, a golden light that clove the night as Hope the encircling gloom. Across the cot where lay the fair, frail form, his hand reached out to hers and met and clasped in tender burning touch. Into the eye of each there came the look that is the light of life; that spoke of self to each, yet told they two were one. It was the mystery to which the mysteries, Life and Death bow down—the mystery of Love.

"One word more, and I am done. And perhaps the House will forgive me if n this last word I take the opportunity of speaking of my own individual case. It is now twenty-two years that I have been the leader of the Liberal party, and during those twenty-two years we have had what we may claim to be a measure of support in all the provinces.

sure of support in all the provinces.

At the present time we have a majority in six provinces out of nine—Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Quebec, Saskatchewan, and Alberta.. I am free to say that the Province of Quebec has always given this Government its chief support. May I not make an open confession and speak with perfect freedom and candour on the present occasion.

"Blood is thicker than water,"—that is not a French saying, it is an English saying. Blood is thicker than water even in the English provinces. It may be that in the Province of Quebec there are men who have given their support to the party with which I am allied because I am of their race. And I may say that, similarly, there may be men who have given their support to my honorable friend opposite because he was of their race.

But, so far as I am concerned, my endeavor has always been to keep the policy of the party upon lines which would appeal to the conscience of all races, and all creeds. At the present time there is in my own province a certain section of my own fellow-countrymen Nationalists they are called today—who have seccied from my party and from myself because I have endeavored at all times to maintain that policy which would appeal to no creed, or race as such, a policy of moderation.

There are, as I have said, certain men, certain young men, who have separated themselves from me for this reason. I have no reproach to make. There are men within my hearing tonight who know that, years ago, I told them that I expected such a thing. For I know that human nature is about what it has always been.

If I may, without presumption, compare my individual self to historical personages, I could find many precedents for such a thing as is occurring in the Province of Quebec. If there was one man who did more than another for Irishmen, that man was Daniel O'Connell. He it was who led in the successful effort men, that man was Damel O'Connell. He it was who led in the successful effort to remove the shackles which penal laws had imposed upon his fellow Irishmen. The day came, however, when he was attacked by some young enthusiasts who thought his policy too moderate. His policy was to ask for the repeal of the Union and for the re-establishment of an Irish parliament upon College Green. But there were certain enthusiasts—the Young Irish Party they called themselves—who thought this policy too moderate and preached complete separation from Great Britain
