A comet far from the sun, appears in spheroidal form, due to gravitation of its ponderable matter-its luminous ether being then invisible because of its distance and feeble light. But on nearing the sun, repulsion being a characteristic property of luminous ether, the ether of the sun repels that of the comet, and thus forms the tail. The form and direction of the tail are thus quite independent of gravitation; and the comet's enormous velocity ceases to be a difficulty, as it is in theories which suppose the matter of the tail to be ponderable. This explanation may account for the comets' tails, but the mystery of the
