Advertising Makes the Town Grow

A writer in Printer's Ink makes an interesting diagnosis of the reason why some towns are 'slow.' He says: Anybody who has had experience travelling among the small cities and towns of the country knows that wide differences are seen between places of the same population, and in much the same locality, and enjoying what would seem to be equal opportunities for trade. One place of 10,000 people, for instance, will be thoroughly alive, its shops bright, its people brisk, and prosperity apparently on every hand. Another, perhaps but 25 miles away, will be thoroughly dead, its stores deserted, dull, dusty, its people given to the habit of cracker-box conversation. In one town it is a pleasure to step off a train and look for business, while in the second an experienced travelling man has no sooner alighted than he wants to know the time of the next train out.

The diagnosis is ridiculously simple. In one, the newspapers encourage like advertising by charging a rate which includes setting up new ads, as often as the merchant cares to change. In the other an antiquated rate system is in vogue, making a low charge for space and an extra charge for every change of advertisement.

It's just worth while considering what good, live advertising by the merchant does for a town and its trade. From the Canadian Grocer, August 23, 1907.

Apply This to Your own Town

Rev. Mr. Philip, pastor of the Arnprior Methodist Church, in a sermon recently delivered from his pulpit on the question of shopping out of your own town, is reported in the Carleton Place Central Canadian as saying: "The question has often come to us, 'Is a man an honest man who lives in one place and deals almost exclusively in another?' It may be at times that a man cannot obtain what he really needs without going outside. We deal with principles and lay down no rules to which there may not be some exception, but it occurs to us that there is something too selfish to be honest in the man say who lives in Arnprior, breathes its salubrious air, walks its granoliths, mingles in its genial society, earns his living here and yet deals in Ottawa or Toronto. He not only lacks in public spirit, in love for his neighbors except he be far away, but owes to the town a debt he is unwilling to pay. A man in honor is just as much bound to deal where he lives as he is to pay his taxes if he could help it. When it comes to a man boasting of how he lives in Arnprior and then goes and sends elsewhere for what he buys he has lost his sense of shame and his emigration from the place would be in the public interest."

How to Take Exercise

A little exercise regularly is good; a great deal of violent exertion all at once, and almost none of the rest of the time, is positively harmful. Where excessive exercise is indulged in, the first organ to suffer is the heart, and if the mistake is persisted in fainting fits or heart failure may occur. The lungs also become congested, and rupture of a blood vessel or hemorrhage are to be feared. It writes gives the following rules for healthy physique:
 (1) All exercise should be done gradually, and sudden exertion must be avoided.
 (2) No competitive or severe exercise should be undertaken without previous training.
 (3) No training should be commenced without a previous medical examination. Compliance with this rule will not only prevent disappointment, but avoid the risk of contracting a new disease or of aggravating an existing one.
 (4) Exercise should never be taken soon after meals, and care must be taken that the clothes are loose and do not interfere with the movements of the chest and limbs.
 (5) After exercise avoid the sudden

The Young Man in Public Life

It was recently pointed out by the London correspondent of a New York newspaper a remarkable feature of the Asquith Ministry is the comparative youthfulness of many of its members. Thus, Lord Lucas is 32, Winston Churchill, 33, Mr. Adair 34, Mr. Masterman 35, Mr. Runciman, 38, and Col. Seely 40. Mr. Kinnon Wood, the most venerable of the Ministers, is 53 years old, while Sir Edward Grey and Mr. Lloyd-George are, respectively, 46 and 45. Now, to the English public, this is no great novelty. There has been a tradition of youth in the House of Commons for two centuries and Englishmen are always ready to see a young man forge ahead on his merits. Moreover, the English Parliamentary system affords opportunity to ambitious youth desiring to rise rapidly to high office.

The classic example is, of course, William Pitt, whose acceptance of the premiership was received in the House of Commons with "derivative laughter," he being then but 24. His father had not entered the Cabinet until he was 48, and did not become Prime Minister until ten years later. Charles James Fox first took his seat in the Cabinet at Winston Churchill's age, and Gladstone was a year older, or 34, as was Robert Peel when he first received a portfolio. Palmerston probably attained this honor younger and became Secretary for War at 25. Lord John Russell became Home Secretary at 43, while Lords Salisbury and Rosebery entered the Cabinet at 36 and 39 years, respectively. Undoubtedly many of these who have become distinguished in early years owed it in part, as did Pitt, to family prestige, they fairly earned their honors. High office cannot be retained in England unless its occupant has ability and brains; with these essentials the path to distinction lies open to men of high and low estate.

This is well illustrated in the Asquith Ministry. Besides John Burns, the workingman, Mr. Lloyd-George and Dr. Macnamara are both men of humble ancestry. The latter was born at the barracks at Montreal, where his father was a regimental sergeant. Their ages, too, prove that the man from the ranks is not kept too long in tutelage. Mr. Runciman whose family have long been wealthy shipowners in Liverpool, stands in a marked degree for the commercial life of the country. The universities are represented among the new men by Lord Lucas and Mr. Masterman. Indeed, one cannot run over the list without feeling that the British Cabinet is more representative than is our own in the Dominion of Canada.

UNION BLEND TEA PRIZE

I beg to thank my many friends for their support during the last year. Many thousands of boys and girls have been rewarded five dollars [$5.00] for collecting and returning the complete alphabet taken from Union Blend Tea packets.
 The success which this mode of advertising has met with has decided me to continue the same method indefinitely, and I hope to distribute ten thousand dollars [$10,000] this way next year.
