Mother-in-Law Joke Very Real in Japan

Young Japanese wife and her dominating mother-in-law.

The mother-in-law problem is not merely a comic supplement joke with the Japanese. It is a stern reality, but the conditions are somewhat reversed from what they are with us. It is the wife that feels the pressure of the mother-in-law in Japan. The wife is the servant of her husband's mother, and the mother never even volunteers to "do the dishes."

"The two Chinese characters representing 'husband' in the Japanese language means 'heavenly person.' Accordingly, his wife is expected to honor him as a thing from heaven. She does this by attending carefully to the duties of the household so as to leave her husband free to carry on the business of life. The true wife will sacrifice fortune and even life for the sake of her lord," says Jiro Shimoda, describing domestic customs among the Japanese in the current number of the Japan Magazine, published at Tokyo.

Continuing, he says: "One of our Japanese savants has said that though a wife were complete in all her accomplishments of the modern world, she would not be a perfect wife if she did not know how to shampoo the head of her husband's father or mother. To married women of the west the idea may come as a shock, but in all respectable circles of Japanese society it is taken as a matter of course. In fact, any violation of it would be a legitimate cause for divorce; for a true husband would rather see his wife show veneration for his parents than for himself."

"The Japanese woman is loved as a wife, and honored as a mother. Thus though her duties are arduous, her life on the whole is happy and contented."

"Though the Japanese woman is required to be gentle above all things, and to keep that spirit alive in her home, she is not a creature without will."

courage or bravery. In old Japan, when a daughter was married, she brought as part of her dowry a dagger, and prepared to defend her husband even on the honeymoon, and to risk her life for him if need be. There are many stories of heroic women in Japan that recall the women of Sparta. But domestic duty must remain her chief responsibility. As the Japanese are a race attaching great importance to cleanliness, the wife must see that the house is daily attended to and kept scrupulously in order; and that not a speck of dust is allowed to collect anywhere within the dwelling.

"In accordance with the Japanese habit of devotion there is in every home a little altar-shelf where the spirits of the ancestors receive daily homage. Before the ancestral tablets as well as before the favorite gods of the family gifts of rice must be laid and prayers offered before the shrine. The wife must attend to these religious duties though all other affairs fall."

"Since the restoration some of these old ideas have become modified somewhat, but the main principles of the civilization remain. Today the intellectual and social atmosphere of the world is attracting the women of Japan to an unusual degree. The change has been effected chiefly through occidental philosophy and literature; and the ideas of some few of our women are becoming so westernized that they are beginning to discuss the independence of woman and advocating the occidental custom of having the newly married couple live in separate houses from the parents. Not only so, but the increasing intensity of the struggle for existence has led many women to seek employment in factories and offices and thus to abandon home life altogether. Industrialism is thus bound to have an important effect upon the future of domestic life in Japan."

SAVED FROM THE KNIFE

APPENDICITIS CURED BY "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Newburgh, Ont., Feb. 12th, 1910. "Just about a year ago, our daughter Ella, (fourteen years), was taken with terrible pains in the right side. The pain was so severe that we had to carry her to bed. We at once put her under the care of a first-class doctor, who pronounced it a case of Appendicitis and advised an operation."

"We took her to a hospital in Kingston where she was again examined by an eminent specialist. He said she must be operated on at once if we wanted to save her life. As we had taken her to Kingston to have this done, we were ready, but our daughter was afraid and cried and begged so pitifully, that we postponed it for that day. Luckily for us and for her an uncle came in with some 'Fruit-a-tives' and insisted on Ella taking them. Good results were apparent, almost from the first dose, and the continuous treatment cured her."

"Fruit-a-tives" saved our daughter from the surgeon's knife and today she is enjoying the best of health."
