

patriot of the land of his adoption. Thousands of American farmers are now settling in our new wheat lands of the west. So far they are almost all taking out naturalization papers."

In regard to immigration his views are decidedly sanguine and most interesting.

"Immigration is only at its beginning. Canada is having in the Northwest what has been going on in the United States since their organization. The farmers of the Atlantic, when the lands became valuable, moved over the mountains to Ohio and took up homesteads there. As that country was settled and prices rose, the farmer with two or three sons sold out and moved on to Illinois, buying a block of cheap land. When Illinois grew, the march was on west to Wisconsin and Iowa. United States western farmers are selling out their high-priced lands and crossing the border to the rich wheat belt of Canada. They can get farms there for themselves and their children, and they see that the same rise in values is bound to take place as has occurred in the United States. There are many millions of acres of farm lands yet to be settled, and good lands are cheap. In some of the towns prices seem to me extravagant. In Winnipeg, for instance, real estate is higher than in Montreal."

The value of the lands owned by the Canadian Pacific and the prospect of their being purchased by settlers have a most intimate relation to the value of the stock of the Canadian Pacific Railway. On these the President is highly optimistic. He denied that a syndicate had offered the company $70,000,000 for the company's lands. An offer had been made which was refused as it is against the policy of the road to sell its lands in that way. What is wanted is settlers who will develop traffic which, the President said, "is worth far more to us than our lands." The traffic is developing rapidly and heavy expenditures are being made in plant and on the road-bed to meet the requirements of enlarging business. "Take the road which goes from Winnipeg to Port Arthur. Our traffic over it this year is double what it was seven years ago. That has been made possible by a better road-bed and rolling stock."

In regard to electricity becoming the motive power of railroads the President of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company said:

"It is a possibility. Indeed, I may say it is a probability. We are already adopting electricity for some of our shorter branch lines, and the day may come when that power will send our engines from coast to coast. The Canadian Pacific has extraordinary advantages in its water power for the development of electricity. Here in the east, in Ontario, we have Niagara. Farther west we have great falls along the line to the prairies. We have falls in the mountains, and altogether a great part of our power could be so generated."

Incidentally he stated that he read law in his early days and when ready for admission to the bar he decided to devote himself to "railroading" which offered more attractive prospects. The decision was a fortunate one for Canada, and doubtless has proved a satisfactory one to Sir Thomas.
