

HELPFUL PARAGRAPHS.

People who are right with God, never spend much time in looking for black spots on others.

The late Rev. C. H. Spurgeon gave the following advice: "There can be no difficulty in discovering some points in which your pastor excels; dwell upon these excellencies, and not upon his failures; talk of the benefit which you receive from his sermons, and you will induce the people to come and listen to him—the house will be filled—you will have done good, he will preach better, you will enjoy him the more because you have thought and spoken kindly of him. Believe, then, the filling up of the church is not alone the pastor's work. All Christians ought to be doing something for Jesus and to be ALWAYS DOING SOMETHING."

A faithful church member is a benediction to any community. He gives moral tone to the whole neighborhood. In fact, he is the "salt of the earth." He is the chief stay of the discouraged minister and of a hesitating, doubtful membership. He is not only a present joy and help to all, but he is the hope of the future, for on him depends every interest of the church. All its future possibilities rest on him.

He may be ignorant of many things that other people know. He may be poor in this world's goods, but if he is faithful to all his church obligations and is found always at his regular place of worship, the people will recognize him as one of God's children and will honor him. Moreover, they will be led to better lives themselves, and when the last sun seems about to set to them they will be glad enough to have him come and lay his hand of toil on their aching brow, or offer a simple, trusting prayer in their behalf.

A wise man on being asked how old he was, answered "I am in health," and when asked how rich he was, replied "I am not in debt."

We have heard of people too poor to take a good newspaper, or give to God's cause, but who ever heard of one too poor to smoke a pipe.
