GERMANS FORCED ADMIT TIDE OF WAR IN THE EAST NOW RUNS AGAINST THEM

Berlin States That the Advance of Russian Reinforcements From Warsaw Has Queered the German Hopes of a Speedy Victory—German War Office Also Says Russians Have Chased the Austrians From the Passes in the Carpathians

(German Official Bulletin.)

Berlin, Nov. 24.—While eventual victory for the Teutonic allies is the East theatre of war is spoken of confidently as ever, official reports from the German-Austrian military headquarters make it appear that the decision will not be reached as soon as had been expected. The final result has been delayed by the advance of new Russian forces from Warsaw.

Austrians announce that they have abandoned to superior hostile forces, several passes in the Carpathians.

Russian troops which are investing Przemysl have been driven back by a sortie, and are not within range of the cannon forts.

The tremendous extent of the battles now raging in the East is apparent from the fact that contests are now progressing along a front extending over 400 miles, between positions at the extreme north and south.

Nothing New From the East

No important reports have been received recently from Servia, from the scene of the Turkish operations, or from the western theatre of war.

There was a light snow fall in Berlin this morning, and the temperature fell below zero.

Russians who crossed the lower Dunajec are not able to proceed further.

The Dutch Chambers are considering a proposal to vote a war loan of 275 millions of florins.

French Consols 3 per cent, are now 74.

It is semi-officially reported that in Belgium recently in an attack on the Bree Woods held by the Zouaves a German column pushing in front of them some Zouave prisoners advanced to the assault crying out "Cease fire."

For an instant our soldiers and quick fires hesitated when from a Zouave in the German ranks came the following cry, "Well in God's name fire."

A general discharge from the Zouaves immediately ensued, mowing down the Germans and the brave soldier who gave his life to foil the enemy's ruse.

High Standard Demanded By The Army Authorities Bars Out Many Britons

In the Factory Districts of Great Britain the Height Regulations Keep Many Willing and Capable Recruits Out of the Army—Recruiting in Earnest

London, Nov. 25.—Very contradictory statements have been made regarding the recruiting appeals. At present strong comment is being uttered by leading dailies upon the apathy shown.

On Saturday, at the football sports, recruiting speeches were delivered by officers on the fields before big crowds attending the matches.

One eminent lawyer even suggests prohibition of football on the ground that betting and other banned sporting practices be forbidden as demoralising to manhood.

Another suggestion made is that the House of Commons put a war tax upon all men not in uniform found attending matches.

On the other hand it is learned that the responses to recruiting circulars issued to all the households in certain districts over the signatures of Premier Asquith and Bonar Law (Opposition) are very gratifying.

The answers to these circulars show that thousands of young men express willingness to be enrolled if called upon. Moreover, many older men exhibit great eagerness, one schedule being filled up by a man of seventy in Lancashire.

Where early factory employment tends to produce short stature, as in Manchester, a branch of the National Service League has drawn attention to the large number of able-bodied men, fit for service, who are ruled out, even by the lower standard of height recently adopted.

The League has registered 500 "bantams" as they are styled, who are willing to serve if the regulations are relaxed on this point.

FRENCH GIVE MUCH CREDIT TO BRITISH

Call the Flight of the Three Aviators to Friedrichshafen on Saturday "Another Fine Exploit"

French Official Bulletin.

Paris, Nov. 24. (Midnight)—Today has been relatively quiet. There has been intermittent cannonading on the front and a few attacks at Argonne, all of which have been repulsed.

An official note published by the French authorities today, giving details of the aeroplane raid made on the Zeppelin balloon factory at Friedrichsafen, last Saturday, says:

"Three British airmen left France on Nov. 21st, by direct air route to the Zeppelin factory at Friedrichshafen. Despite artillery fire, which was virtually continuous throughout the 250 miles' journey over hostile territory, the three aviators reached their goal.

They bombarded the factory, which we believe to have suffered considerable damage. One aviator seems to have been wounded. The other two returned with their machines more or less damaged by the enemy's fire.

This long flight over one of the most mountainous regions in Germany, executed through unfavorable atmospheric conditions, is another fine exploit to the credit of the British airmen."

Will Start Recruiting On Monday

Volunteers Can Then Enrol at the C.L.B. Armoury for the Second Newfoundland Regiment

Recruiting for the second Contingent begins at the C.L.B. Armoury on Monday night next.

One thing is certain, Kitchener needs all the men he can get, and we feel certain that Newfoundland will do its duty.

CREDIT WHERE CREDIT IS DUE

A CABLEGRAM from Paris this morning makes reference to the brilliant work of the British aviators who flew for two hundred miles across difficult hostile country and dropped bombs on the German airship base at Friedrichshafen.

Yesterday the News made quite a splash in its editorial columns about The Brave French Aviators, just why nobody but the editor of that paper seems to know.

Maybe he was trying to encourage the aviators of our allies to emulate the daring of our own airmen; perhaps he made up his mind that the message yesterday was all wrong and that praise for the intrepid feat belonged to the French and not to the British—at any rate he gave most people the impression that they were French and not British aviators who flew some distance inland in Germany and inflicted serious damage on the German Zeppelin sheds.

That's hardly fair to our airmen. They have distinguished themselves in notable fashion during this campaign and almost every offical report from British Army Headquarters in the field bears testimony to the yeoman service they have done and still continue to do. It is not so very long ago, either, since British airmen made a daring raid on Dusseldorf and Cologne. The latest feat of theirs therefore, is certainly not unbelievable, if the record of the British airfleet during the war be taken into account.

And it is rather unnecessary, too, to attempt to make the French shine in the light of brave deeds performed by the British. Our allies have nobly done their share of the fighting on the land and in the air and have made a record for bravery, skill and daring all their own.

And they are gallant gentlemen, these same French allies of ours, as witness their wholehearted tribute to the British aviators. They recognise and admire courage when they see its evidences and are delighted to bear their comrades of the British forces, so why dost thou not give credit where credit is due, O brother of The Daily News?

French Official Report Strikes Note of Confidence

Says Germans Have Been Foiled and Decisively Worsted in all the Strategical Moves They Have Attempted to Make

French Official Bulletin.

Paris, Nov. 24 (midnight).—It was rather quiet with cannonading, now and again, on the front. Several German attacks in the Argonne were all repulsed.

The following official bulletin of the Republican Armies has been published:

"Now that the results acquired are clear, the time is come to render a report of the last six weeks which may be summed up as follows: The enormous effort on the part of the Germans at first to outflank our left and then to pierce through, has completely failed.

"The enemy reckoned on the success of this effort to repair the defeat of the Marne but has only added another reverse to his September reverse.

"After our victory of the Marne had compelled the German armies to retreat quickly the latter endeavored immediately to regain the advantage and always by pushing overwhelmingly on our left.

"But nowhere were they successful. On the contrary, during this time, we managed to extend our left wing up to Belgium and to the sea-coast. We then maintained this left line unbreakably to the point it had been laid.

"The success gained in Flanders, and of which French troops bore the principal front, is thus a continuation an extension and a conservation of the victory of the Marne.

"But, however satisfactory these results may be, they do not constitute entirely the cause of our confidence because the progress of our armies is now corresponding to the progress of the Russian army accentuated since the 3rd of November at the doors of Cracow and Kalich.

"Our Allies are now laying a heavy weight in the balance with our forces."

Hurried Retreat Of the Turk Army

(Russian Official Bulletin.)

Petrograd, Nov. 24.—In the region of Tchocuk (Russian Armenia) the battle has increased in intensity.

"The enemy is in disorderly flight, which is bound to provoke panic in the whole German Empire.

Nevertheless, here and there, have been several infantry attacks, all repulsed as usual. These attacks have been particularly violent in Argonne, where we have gained ground in the region of Tour de Paris.

There is nothing to report between Argonne and the Vosges. Thick fog hindered operations.

The sanitary condition of the troops is excellent. German losses in the battle in Flanders are estimated up to now as over 120,000.

In the region of Pont-a-Moussons, our artillery found it possible to bombard Arnaville.

Nothing has happened in the Vosges.
