

LONG TERMS IN PENITENTIARY HANDED OUT TO CONSPIRATORS IN DYNAMITING CASE MONDAY

Ryan Drew Seven Years and Number of Others Also Received Sharp Sentences—Six Were Released Through Suspended Sentence—Remarkable Scene as Wives of the Prisoners Struggled to Reach Husbands—All Objections Overruled—Prisoners to Go on Special Train—Judge Anderson Talked With Prisoners For Hour and a Half

(By Leased Wire to The Sun.)

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 30.—A remarkable scene in the struggle of the wives of the prisoners to reach their husbands attended the sentences. It was ordered that all the spectators should be cleared from the room and the prisoners be allowed to talk with the members of their families. Some of the men made pleas for mercy; others wept in the arms of their wives, but the court pronounced the sentences one by one regardless of the pleas. Six men were given their liberty through suspended sentences. These included Edward Clark of Cincinnati, the dynamiter, who confessed to blowing up a bridge with the help of Hockin. He had appeared as a witness for the government.

Orrie McManigal, another confessed dynamiter, was not sentenced at all this time. In some cases sentences of one year and one day were imposed so that these men might be confined in a federal prison. Prisoners with sentences less than one year are kept in county jails.

Federal Judge Albert B. Anderson had many of the prisoners who he considered less guilty than the rest, brought before him to make statements. For an hour and a half the judge thus in a conversational way talked with the prisoners, asking them whether they believed in dynamiting as a method of promoting a strike. All of the men professed innocence.

Arrangements for taking the prisoners to Leavenworth on a special train already had been made.

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 30.—All motions for new trials for the 38 labor union officials convicted in the dynamite conspiracy cases today were overruled by Federal Judge Anderson. Motions for arrest of judgment in the case of all the men also were overruled. As soon as court convened a few minutes after 10 a.m., District Attorney Miller rose from his seat.

"If the court please, the government asks for judgments on the verdicts," he said.

Chester H. Krump, counsel for the prisoners, then addressed the court. "We ask in behalf of all the 38 men found guilty that the verdicts be set aside."

"That motion will be overruled," said the court. The motions for arrest of judgment were likewise disposed of.

Turning toward the prisoners Judge Anderson said:

"It has been more difficult than we expected to arrive at the degree of guilt in each of your cases. Have any of you anything to say why sentence should not be pronounced against you?"

Silence greeted this question until Patrick F. Farrell stepped before the Judge. "Your honor," said Farrell, I have something to say in my behalf. "Something might have been said in your behalf that was not said," interrupted the court. "Is it a fact that you were not in sympathy with the dynamiting campaign?"

"That is a fact, your honor," responded Farrell. "In 1907 I voted against a resolution to continue the strike of the iron workers. I never have been in sympathy with dynamiting."

"Farrell's action in trying to lap certain officials in the iron works union might be construed two ways," said District Attorney Miller.

"Then we will take the innocent way," said Judge Anderson. "I have been on the bench ten years, and never have sentenced a man I believed innocent."

"This man Farrell is one of the least guilty of them all, and if he had had proper legal advice he might have been found not guilty," said Mr. Miller. Farrell is of New York, and was once an executive board member of the Iron Workers Union.

James Cooney, of Chicago, next appeared before the court. Cooney was questioned whether he had written any letters about dynamite plots. He said he never had and Mr. Miller said no letters of Cooney's had been introduced because there were none of importance. "Why should Orrie E. McManigal testify falsely against you?"

"Do you believe that organized labor has the right to resort to violence in its strikes?" asked the court. "I do not," said Cooney.

Asked whether there was any evidence against Cooney other than McManigal's testimony, Mr. Miller said three witnesses corroborated McManigal's testimony. McManigal's testimony was as a hired dynamiter he met Cooney in a saloon in Chicago with President Ryan of the Iron Workers union, and that they all referred to dynamiting non-union jobs.

James Coughlin, former iron worker business agent in Chicago, was next called. While Coughlin was walking forward, Judge Anderson said: "I learn one of these defendants told an officer of the court that if all the ironworkers who had knowledge of dynamiting were caught the jails of the country would be filled. That evidence has been bad enough but this report may not be convincing. As to Cooney, I have not yet reached a decision."

Coughlin was asked about his connection with the union. The district attorney interrupted, saying the evidence was enough to justify the verdict.

"Do you think the dynamiting campaign carried on for six years was right?" asked Judge Anderson.

"No sir, your honor, I don't," said Coughlin. Coughlin told the court he was married and had two children. He said he never had been arrested before. At this time Judge Anderson did not indicate when he would impose sentence. Terms of imprisonment were imposed as follows:

Frank M. Ryan, president of the Iron Workers Union, 7 years; John T. Butler, Buffalo, vice president, 6 years; Herbert S. Hockin, former secretary and formerly of Detroit, 6 years; Olaf A. Evitmoose, San Francisco, secretary of the California Building Trade Council, 6 years; Eugene A. Clancey, San Francisco, six years; Philip A. Cooney, New Orleans, six years; Michael J. Young, Boston, 6 years; Frank Higgins, Boston, 2 years; J. E. Muncey, Salt Lake City, 6 years; John H. Barry, St. Louis, four years; Paul Morrin, St. Louis, three years; Henry W. Legleitner, Denver, 3 years; Charles N. Beum, Minneapolis, 3 years; Frank C. Webb, New York, six years; Fred J. Mooney, Duluth, one year and one day; Wm. J. McCain, Kansas City, 3 years; Wm. Redd, Milwaukee, three years; Richard H. Houlihan, Chicago, 2 years; Wm. H. Shupe, Chicago, one year and one day; Edward Smythe, 3 years; James E. Ray, Peria, Ill., one year and one day; Murray I. Pennel, Springfield, Ill., 3 years; Wm. Bohart, Cincinnati, one year and one day.

ANOTHER ALLEGED ATTEMPT AT BOLD HOLD-UP OCCURRED HERE ON SATURDAY NIGHT

Two Young Desperadoes Smartly Caught by Chief Berry After Leaving Store Where They Had Flourished Revolvers—Poor Haul From Another Place—Jews Lucky Escape

Two rough looking youths, giving their names as J. J. Johnson and A. J. McDonald, caused quite a lot of excitement north of the C.P.R. tracks on Saturday night but thanks to the efforts of Chief Berry they are now safely in the toils until a week from tomorrow when charges of robbery and attempted robbery will be heard against them.

It appears that about 9:30 on Saturday night the two men went to the store of H. Cooperman, 30 10th street north, and commanded the proprietor who was standing behind the counter to throw up his hands. This he did being scared almost out of his wits, but luckily another man happened to be in the store and ran out to give the alarm. Meanwhile the desperadoes left and visited a house owned by Mr. H. L. Patmore where they took $5 from a till. As soon as the men left Cooperman's store a phone message was sent to the police station. Chief Berry and a constable went towards the vicinity and while crossing the C. P. R. tracks the chief espied two suspicious looking men. He accosted them and as they gave unsatisfactory answers he took them to the store where they were identified. Between the time they had left the store and the time they were seen by the chief the two young men had thrown away two powerful revolvers one a .32 calibre and the other .38, and also some boxes of cartridges.

At the Police Court. When in the dock this morning the two prisoners presented the appearance of ordinary hoboes, their faces and hands being very grimy. Neither of them appeared to understand the gravity of the offence and without being asked to speak they were remanded on a charge of attempting to rob Cooperman's store. Subsequently they were again placed in the dock and the charge of robbing Mr. Patmore of 25c was also added. They will come up tomorrow week.

Jew's Lucky Escape. From what can be gathered it was lucky for a Jew who happened to be in Cooperman's store that he was near the door and not covered by either of the alleged desperadoes as he had something like $600 in his possession. At Mr. Patmore's place the two men took all the money that was left in the till, and that was 25c. It is understood that one of the men is ready to confess and tell the whole story. The two, however, are believed to be of a dangerous type and well acquainted with police cells.
