The soil, tention in England. the climate, the adaptation of crops when considered in relation to both these conditions, must be understood by the successful agriculturist. Much that is now done by mere guess work will be based on scientific and well understood principles, and the farmer instead of being a drudge will take his place among the educated man who knows the fundamental principles of his business and is able to turn his knowledge to practical account. The farmer is being boomed and he is booming himself, and every step in his advance ment means additional prosperity to the country in which he labors. The possibilities of the soil in Canada are almost boundless, and while the cities may prosper and the towns swell in importance, the true index of development and prosperity of a country is its agricultural, advancement.

GREAT LIBERAL GATHERING.

Hon. Mr. Laurier was at Brantford, Ontario, Monday, and addressed two monster Liberal meetings, the attendance at each being estimated at five thousand ment of facts, which cannot be confuted by his opponents. At the outset he went back over the past fifty years history of Canada, and spoke of the struggle the Liberals made for responsible government in the colonies. To this great work was due the civil and religious freedom we now enjoy, but with all the good work the Reformers had done in the past, they yet had the great task before them of developing the Canadian confederation, until it becomes one of the grandest nations of the earth. Speaking of the charge that he spoke one sentiment in Quebec and another in Ontario, Mr. Laurier challenged the Conservatives to produce one word ever uttered by him in his own province that he would not dare to address to an Ontario audience. He wanted all to understand that he was a Canadian above everything else.

The Liberals he said, had many things to contend against, but one thing above all others, was the selfishness of the men now in power. One of the reasons why Canada had not progressed as she ought to have progressed, was the extravagance of the government of the day. This extravagance had resulted in an enormous taxation upon the people of this country. In 1865 Sir John Macdonald had predicted that, with confederation, in thirty years, Canada ought to have a population of 9,000,000 people. The small increase that had taken place was owing to the manner in which the people had been ground by taxation. In Mr. Mackenzie's time, the departmental expenditure was $400,000 a year; today it was $800,000 a year, or an increase of 100 per cent., while the population had only increased nine per cent. There was no justification for such a state of affairs as that. The great bulk of the increase was a corrupt expenditure. He did not believe it would be very difficult to retrench the public expenditure by two or three millions per annum, or probably even four million dollars a year. Was there any Conservawho would approve of expenditure in connexion with the franchise act? The government themselves did not approve of this expenditure. They were ashamed
