A Manly Retraction.

NEWSPAPER MAKES AMENDS.

Concerning an article reprinted in the Telegram some time ago from a Wilmington, Delaware, newspaper, in which there was gross misrepresentation of an address delivered before St. Andrew's Men's Club by Rev. Edgar Jones, late Rector of the Church of St. Thomas of St. John's, and which was subsequently followed by a letter from the reverend gentleman himself, we to-day give publication to an editorial article taken from the Evening Journal of Wilmington, dated December 15, in which the editor of that paper makes a most frank and manly retraction of the reportorial substance of Dr. Jones' address in the following:—

"OUR AMENDS TO DR. JONES.
While the Evening Journal is not infallible in the handling of either editorial or news matter, it prides itself upon being big enough and fair enough to make frank amends when it has been convinced that it has worked an injury upon any man, woman or child. We always have felt that such frank amends strengthen us in individual and public respect and also in self-respect.

Some time ago the Rev. Edgar Jones, rector of St. Thomas's Church, Newark, delivered an address before the Men's Club of St. Andrew's Church, this city. His subject embraced Newfoundland and the Labrador. In the former he had served in a ministerial capacity in a parish that has 4,000 parishioners; in the latter he had done extensive missionary work among the fishermen and the full-blood and half-breed natives.

In a foreword to his address, Mr. Jones said he wished his auditors to differentiate clearly between what he said about Newfoundland and what he said about the Labrador.

Despite that request a reporter for another newspaper calmly and carelessly proceeded to write a story in which all the nice things that Mr. Jones said about Newfoundland and its up-to-date features were applied to the Labrador, while all the things he said about that cold and bleak stretch of seaboard known as the Labrador were applied to Newfoundland. The reporter for our paper, just as carelessly and just as calmly, followed that lead when preparing his story next morning.

That would have been bad enough in itself, but somebody sent a copy of the other newspaper to a newspaper in St. John's, Newfoundland, and the article was reproduced. Quite naturally the people up there were indignant when they read it and lost no time in bombarding Mr. Jones with letters of protest. He, in turn, appealed to the local newspapers to set him right with his thousands of friends in Newfoundland and, so far as we are concerned, we hasten to do it, at the same time expressing regret that reportorial carelessness creates a situation which impels us to do something that would have been unnecessary had ordinary care been exercised in reporting what in reality was a glowing tribute to Newfoundlanders and a highly-sympathetic discussion of conditions in the Labrador.

War Made Genius.

Sum of $500,000 Distributed to Inventors.

Over $500,000 has been awarded to inventors by the Royal Commission which dealt with 117 claims. This Commission, appointed in March, 1919, rejected something like a third of the claims. The task, no light one, has been a revelation to the Commission to find how fertile have been the brains of British engineers, chemists, and others, although not every claim was valid. It has been amazing, too, to find that very many people thought of the same device. Who was the first to suggest the tanks? "We had 85 claims on that point alone," mentioned Mr. P. Tindal-Robertson, secretary to the Commission, "and as you know, there had to be a judicial inquiry. Some 70 persons claimed to have suggested the net defence of London against aerial attack. But that was an obvious suggestion, and was in the minds of our military advisers before any such idea was submitted from outside. An enormous number of claimants strongly held that the paravane was their idea of invention. Of course it was nothing of the sort. It was adapted from a device that had been in use long before the war. Before claims were submitted to the Commission they were dealt with by an Investigating Committee consisting of Mr. Justice Sargent and myself. The Commission has heard and decided 177 claims, and the Investigating Committee have up to date sifted 397. I should think we have completed about half our task. Possibly we have dealt with a little more than half the total number of claims likely to be made. The lowest sum we have awarded is $100—such an award has been frequently made—and the highest was one of £110,000 to the patentees of an aeroplane engine. The work done by Mr. Justice Sargent on the Investigating Committee of the Commission has been tackled after his judicial labors in the Law Courts."

Germany Interested in Military Disarmament.

Cologne.—(Associated Press).—Germany generally has been keeping a watchful eye on the Washington Conference for Limitation of Armaments through the newspapers, which have published columns of cable dispatches each day. Writing in the Cologne Post, a daily newspaper published by the British army on the Rhine, "A Student of Germany," says that, as the bulk of Germany's old navy lies at the bottom of Scapa Flow, it is not naval disarmament in which Germany today has the primary interest. He adds: "Germany is much more concerned with military or land disarmament, and there are sections of opinion in Germany which awaited any military disarmament proposals from Washington with almost feverish anticipation." The writer refers to Germany's army of 100,000 as provided by the Treaty of Versailles as "figures on paper" contending that there are secret military organizations throughout the country. "The Tyrol to-day is a center of military intrigue," he says. "Bavaria seethes with it." The writer, however, sees a glimmer of hope in his assumption that "Germany (or some of her) has shown some signs of 'turning over a new leaf.' Vast sections of the community and most of her present leaders would not lead her into war. The Socialists to a man would revolt, if war were preached." In conclusion, he says: "Germany looks to the Washington Conference with a heart full of hope."

Tower of London Ghost.

CROWN JEWEL KEEPER'S GRIM EXPERIENCE.

The Tower of London is said to have many ghosts, whispering, mysterious midnight stillnesses, broken only by the moaning wind and fitting shadows and speckles, amongst whom can be seen the mournful shape of the once glorious Sir Walter Raleigh. But the most circumstantial story of ghosts in the Tower says nothing of these things, and tells of an entirely unexpected form of phenomena.

The account comes from the former of the Crown Jewels, Mr. Lenthal Swifte, who was an eye witness of these amazing occurrences.

The family were at supper one Saturday night. Mr. Swifte had offered a glass of wine to his wife. On putting it to her lips she paused and exclaimed: "Good heavens! What is that?"

"This lasted about two minutes; then it began slowly to move before my sister-in-law; following the oblong shape of the table before my son and myself, passing behind my wife, it paused for a moment over her right shoulder.

"Instantly she crouched down and shrieked, 'Heavens, it has seized me!' I caught up my chair, struck at the waistcoat behind her, rushed upstairs to the children's room, and told the nurse what I had seen."

We have no space to recount all the weird happenings of that and subsequent nights, or the tragic sequel, for one of the sentries on duty was so alarmed by a figure he saw that he thrust at it with his bayonet, which stuck in the door. He then fell, and died of fright shortly afterwards.

De Luxe Air Travel.

THE LATEST IN COMFORT.

PARIS. (Associated Press).—Ample proof that travel by air has now reached the same "luxurious" standards as travel by land was given in the seventh annual aero salon here. No longer need prospective air travellers hesitate for lack of convenience, comfort and experts say, also safety. Danger from fire and engine trouble has been reduced to a minimum by the latest inventions in aviation. Promoters of continental air transportation guarantee smoother travel through the air at a speed of 125 miles an hour, than is possible to experience on even the slowest of trains. The airplane will play a most important part in the Red Cross work of future wars. Air operating rooms with full equipment and air ambulances for less urgent cases are a practical reality. Several unusual machines were shown to prove this, one a complete aero hospital, accommodating two patients on stretchers, a doctor and an assistant with complete operating necessities, including a table. The newest stabilizing appliances permit the surgeon to operate while the machine goes through space at 100 miles an hour. There were several air ambulances with space for two or four wounded soldiers. The last word in de luxe air travel is a tremendous machine built to carry 24 passengers at a speed of 130 miles an hour. It is a veritable "air limited" with all the features of an American transcontinental express except the observation platform. It contains a bathroom, a smoking-room with card tables, comfortable lounge chairs which are made into beds for night travel, a kitchenette, icebox and stove. Room is also provided for a crew of three. Increased size in wings is provided on all late machines as means of increasing stability. Some of the passenger machines have lookout cabins for observers and one machine has two tail seats for experienced air travellers.

Household Notes.

Sponge cake requires fewer eggs if baking powder is used.

Griddle cakes will be tough and indigestible if turned twice.

Oily bottles may be easily cleaned if a little ammonia is used.

Apple jelly can be made with the peelings of your cooking apples.

Garnish triscasses with small baking powder biscuits cut in halves.

One-third cup grapes may be used in place of walnuts in candy.

Add a little celery salt to potato soup. It gives it a delicious flavor.

Potato water and whey can be used instead of milk in cake baking.

Add grated cheese or slices of hard boiled eggs to vegetable scallops.

Left-over meat can be cubed, reheated in white sauce and served on toast.

If too many cakes are piled on one plate the steam will make them soggy.

A new way in which to garnish a triscasse of fowl is with fried croutons of bread.
