Salvage Notes.

Mr. Chard, of Bonavista, has been busy during the past week in the interests of the Union Trading Co. taking stock of goods held at local store.

In connection with the Union store, we might add that Dame Rumour has reported that during the winter Mr. Brown, the present clerk, is going to be given a rest, while a new clerk will supply the vacated position.

The past few days, though refreshingly wholesome, herald the rapid approach of King Frost. On Tuesday the "Fidels," the capable little mission boat handled by the Rector, was taken from the ice-filled harbour, and placed in bonded security until the spring thaw.

Mr. Barnabas Moss, Bishop of H.R., who had been to St. John's for some time trying to dispose of his season's catch of fish, returned home by way of Alexander Bay on Tuesday morning.

Mr. Joseph Squires, Salvage Bay, incidentally the oldest inhabitant in the place, was very near being burned out last week. Fortunately the destruction of a part of the roof and the application of water were successful in overcoming the flames. We understand the damage done did not amount to much.

We understand that in the near future we are slated to hear the Rev. F. B. Boone, ardent Unionist. We shall be glad to listen to the attempt of Mr. Boone to draw back recalcitrant members to the Union fold. (We presume such is one of the ideas back of the lecturer's approach.)

Local beef is selling at 15 and 16 cents per lb. delivered. Indications, however, point to lower prices during the coming months.

Messrs. F. B. Boone and R. G. Winsor, M.H.A., lectured in the Orange Hall last night. The attendance was good. As far as constructive policy is concerned, we cannot congratulate Mr. Boone on his address. Of course in an outpost anything to break the monotony is generally welcome, but whether we gain much from such lectures as that of last night is exceedingly problematical.

The preparation of bough decorations for the church remind us poignantly of the happy Xmas season, and since this must be our last notes are that season approaches, we take this opportunity of extending to all, particularly those of our readers formerly resident in this vicinity, but now domiciled elsewhere throughout our island home, not only the outward festivity of the times, but also the inward joy of which the verbal greetings are but a symbol, a treasured symbol it is true, of Christmaseve.—COR.

Pre-Columbian Skeleton Found.

Dr. J. Walter Fewkes, chief of the bureau of American ethnology, Smithsonian Institution, who has recently returned from a season of archaeological fieldwork on the Mesa Verde National Park, Colorado, reports the unexpected unearthing of a most interesting and instructive prehistoric ruin to which he has given the name "Pipe Shrine House," because of the large number of tobacco pipes which were found scattered in a circular shrine just as they had been thrown there during ceremonial rites untold centuries ago, says the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Last May Dr. Fewkes undertook the excavation of a mound in the neighborhood of what is known to many tourist as Mummy Lake. The results of his excavations were as instructive as interesting and unexpected. Out of the mound emerged a rectangular building about 70 feet square and one story high, accurately oriented to the cardinal points of the compass, with a circular tower formerly 15 to 20 feet high, like a church steeple midway in the western wall. This tower is supposed to have been for observation, and as it is very important for an agricultural people to determine the seasons of the year, it was probably by watching the sun as it rose or set that they determined the time for planting and for other events.

In the middle of this building was found a circular room 20 feet deep and about the same in diameter, in which were found more than a dozen clay pipes, numerous stone knives, pottery, idols and other objects. Pipes of this kind have never before been found on the Mesa Verde, and as all the indications point to the belief that after the rite of smoking they were thrown into the shrine, the ruins were called Pipe Shrine House. A few feet south of the building, which was not a habitation but specialized for ceremonies, there is a square room or shrine dedicated to the mountain lion—a stone image of which was found surrounded by water-worn stones and other strangely formed stones. A similar shrine is found on the northeast corner of Pipe House Shrine, in which, among other objects, was a small iron meteorite, and a slab of stone on which is depicted a symbol of the sun. The ceremonies of the Pueblos of the Mesa Verde are situated near their southeast corner, and while the burials in them have, as a rule, been removed by vandals, several internments were found in the cemetery near Pipe Shrine House. One of these was left without moving a single bone and an inclosure with a weather-proof roof was erected over it, so that a visitor can view a skeleton more than 5000 years old with food bowls and other pieces of pottery, just as they were when left by relatives that long ago. This is said to be the first time care has been taken to preserve for inspection of pre-Columbian skeleton for an Indian in his own cemetery.

A good one, we've no doubt—
The trouble these days is to find something to laugh about.

"Lord Rossmore" Did Not Get By.

Booked on the C.P.O.S. Empress of Britain as "Lord Rossmore," Richard Banbury, an alleged impostor, of London, was taken off the boat on her arrival by immigration officers, says a Quebec special to the Montreal Star. When the Empress was a day out of Southampton the purser received a wire from a London paper saying that the real Lord Rossmore was comfortably at home in Hampton court. Confronted by the ship's captain "his Lordship" admitted that he was but plain Richard Banbury and the purser made haste to put his name among the additional passengers and that of Lord Rossmore among those "not on board."

To the immigration men Banbury gave his address as the Hotel Langham, London. "Of independent means" he gave out when asked his occupation. He said he had intended visiting friends in Montreal whose names he would not divulge and that he then intended to cross Canada on his way to Honolulu. He was asked why he did not take out the necessary British passport for Hawaii but he could not answer.

In the dining room at breakfast he voiced hearty regret at the "prank," as he called it.

"I meant no harm," he said. "It was just for the bet."

When he was approached by a newspaper man he blurted out "this is a horrible thing and you pressmen are awfully persistent."

Two Thousand Troubled Years.

Two thousand troubled years, Time's weary brow has worn. Since the Strange Star to Shepherds told, The Prince of Peace was born. Two thousand years of gloom, Of groping toward the light, Of prophesied scorn'd and martyr slain And battle done for right. But year by year the bells, The old glad tidings bring, And men forget their strife, to keep The birthday of the King. Christ's kingdom yet will come, And good prevail o'er all. Though often with a crown of thorns We mock the Master still; Yet he will not forsake The world for which he died, Till all mankind be gathered home, At the great Christmas-tide. —ALFRED HAYES.
