On reaching the home of Mr. Plant, the travellers were first introduced to the delights of the refreshing citric fruit, which hung in clusters on the trees, bending the branches almost to the ground. Thousands of bushels lay on the ground under the trees, from which they had fallen. There was no market for them. Only a few of the native Floridians liked them, so the fruit that could not be eaten by Mr. Plant's immediate friends was left just where it fell.
