The two great developments of the twentieth century, radio and air navigation by the dirigible, are as yet little known in Russia to the mass of the people.

THINKS 'DON'TS' AND 'MUSTS' ENTER INTO CHILD-TRAINING

Boys and Girls Should Learn To Do Things They Do Not Like.

UP TO PARENTS

Should Make Children Understand Why They "Must" Do a Thing.

By JULIA HOYT.
"Thou shalt never say 'don't' to a child," and "Thou shalt avoid the word 'must'; it implyeth doing a thing against one's will"—these are two more "commandments" in the decalogue of which I have spoken. I agree only in part.
Surely we cannot believe that children are perfect nor can we expect them to know instinctively how to behave. We know that later in life all of us have both "don't" and "must" shouted at us forcibly, both directly and indirectly. It seems to me that it is a little hard on a child to bring it up never having heard the words, and then thrust it on the world to meet them on all sides.
An interesting example of the word "must" used decidedly for the benefit of the child was given to me the other day. A New York woman has a daughter of fifteen who is already showing great talent and promise in an imaginative, rather fantastic way. As would go with that sort of temperament, the child dislikes all practical questions. In discussing her the mother said to me:
"I lay more stress at the moment on my daughter's standing well in her mathematics than in any other study at school, because I realize that her imagination must have the balance of a certain amount of logic and stability. If she achieves this, her imaginative powers will yield far bigger results."

She is right.
As we grow older we attain the realization that in order to become proficient in the thing we want to do we must very often develop our minds and our forces in channels which may seem to have nothing to do with the thing which we really love. We cannot, however, expect children to understand this, and un-
