Whatcom.

Property Owners Refused to Let Applicants Get a Site.

Whatcom, June 23.—The Royal Bank of Canada has abandoned its project of locating here, owing to the opposition among the local business men. A prejudice exists here against foreign banks locating in the city, as it is generally believed in business circles that they come here for the purpose of getting deposits and subsequently shipping them out of the country.

and subsequently shipping them out of the country.

Edward O. Graves, one of the most prominent bankers of the state, and head of the banking firm of Graves & Purdy, of Whatcom, was seen at his residence yesterday evening. He said:

"Public opinion in Whatcom is very much exercised in this matter, and has been manifested in the press and elsewhere. The property owners so far have refused to let the Royal Bank of Canada have a site, and I understand that the Canadian bank has abandoned its intention of establishing a branch there. There are many reasons why it is

"There are many reasons why it is against public policy to permit the establishment of foreign banks in this country, and as a matter of fact the Pacific Coast states are the only ones where it is permitted. For one thing, such banks are under no restrictions as to the way in which their deposits shall be employed. They can and do send them to their branches in the Dominion of Canada, where a higher rate of interof Canada, where a higher rate of interest prevails than in this country, and thus all the benefit from these moneys is thus all the benefit from these moneys is lost to the state.

"Again, under the Canadian law, their notes are a first lien upon assets, but they are not in circulation in this country, thus in case of a disastrous failure the entire assets, including the American deposits, might be used in reimbursing Canadian note holders.

"Domestic bankers are thoroughly identified with the community. They belong to the most substantial and enterprising class of citizens, who build homes and invest their earnings in the community where they live. The profits of their banks are distributed among American citizens, and chiefly among the citizens of our own state. Managers of foreign hanks are usually aliens without American citizens, and chiefly among the citizens of our own state. Managers of foreign banks are usually aftens without a stake in the country, moving from point to point as directed, and the profits of the banks go to foreign shareholders. "Furthermore, they are not handicapped or taxed like domestic banks, which gives them an unfair advantage. These branches have little or no capital set aside for local use, and so, notwithstanding the large capital of the parent conjugations. ing the large capital of the parent con-cern, it is incorrect to describe them as cern, it is incorrect to describe them as bringing in large sums of money for the devolpment of the country. The banks of the state of Washington, moreover, as their balances show, have ample funds for all requirements.

'American banks are not permitted in Canada unless they comply with the Canadian law, which requires a charter from the Dominion government, a subscription of not less than $500,000 capital, and, among other things, that three-fourths of the directors shall be Canadian subjects. dian subjects. Thus there is no ground of international comity under which foreigners can ask to be permitted to do a banking business in this state."
