father, who now seldem came to the house, took me a few days ago to a private inastic asylum near Ongar. I owed obedience to a parent, but note to a mad dogtor. Yesterday I crept through the garden hedge, walking across the fields to avoid observation, and secaped? I hoped to reach London, but fainted with fatigue at this good woman's gate.

Obtaining a wagonatte at a neighboring farm, for she was too weak to walk the short distance to the station, we brought the poor fugitive to Dr. Vereker's house.

By dint of inquiries it transpired that a cierk at the bank in Lims had left his cituations a few years previously in order to become Colonel Delmar's confidential secretary; he was with him up to the time of the siege. Having possession of imperant documents and an intimate knowledge of his employer's private affairs, be sides being of aimilar age and stature, doubtless the facilities for the perpetration of a gigantic frand tempted him, sacrificing his right hand that his well-knewn writing might net betrey him. His next step was to obtain possession of Teresa and the use of her fortune, her gasher having been sole guardian and trustee to the young believes. The impos-

To the world of fashion it was given out that the marriage of Lady Augusta and Colonel Gonzales was broken off in consequence of a quarrel and that the Colonel and quitted England.

Teresa Delmar's health was very delicate for some time owing to the strain on her pervous system, but, thanks to a good consequence, great heiress though she was, until she attained her majority, She is sow the light and jey of her husband's bome. Can you guess who he is?
