The grand jury of Siskyou County has been staggered by the evidence brought before it. The foreman said to-day: "What a meet will come to light. This body has three true bills to present to-morrow and is only waiting to learn if the evidence supporting more will come in."

Outlived Suspicion.

To be sure, rumor has in the past cast a shadow on the name of Docker, but that was years ago, when this was a lawless region, and those who were old enough to talk have since didd or moved away. The man outlived suspicion. He grew to be a leader of men. He acquired wealth and influence. He has not slept without a member of his family in his room for 20 years. This has been made known, along with the damning evidence, since the shopherd found the dust covered bones in a cave on the Kildere bills.

Yreka was once a great town on the coast. It was a mining centre, and in the early six, ties was in this giory. To-day it is as large as it was bhen, but hardly larger, and danger min to a prosperous farming switch to two more than to will be not one and a woman with two will be no one a way months later. "I will stop her," remarked Decker, walking to the cradle. An hour later the little one was found dead. There was no investigation at that time, for Decker was thought an honest and upright man, but an old woman has been found who was at that time a nurse, and she says she saw marks of fingers on the baby's throat.

Edward Stone died a natural death a few months later, and beside his body that of his wife was soon laid. So Decker came in-

Some persons have said unpleasant things about Decker in past years, but they were soon forgotten. Wealth and property was the armor plate that shielded him from the sheft of suspicion, and it was nothing but suspicion. Then the shepherd found the bones in the cavern.

All links seemed to spring together in a chain, and this fastened itself upon the neck of the respected townsman, George Decker. Fortunate for him that he is in prison to day, that the walls are strong and that the sheriff has sworn in a number of deputies.

All along the Pacific Coast the story of his crimes is being told. It will soon become a narrative of international interest, for it will

Ghosts That Haunt Him,

Ghosts That Haunt Him.

These are the ghosts that it is now thought haunted Decker: His first wife and her newborn babe, murdered in the Kildere Hills; his second wife, believed to have been poisoned; Benny, the son of his first wife, died, no one knows how, in Oregon; a boy, the son of his second wife; Rosie, the daughter of his second wife; Rosie, the daughter of his second wife; Edward, the busband of the daughter of his second wife; Edward, the busband of the daughter of his second wife; Edward the busband of the daughter of his second wife; Edward and Rosie, strangled in her cradle.

This makes eight in all. Some may have died from natural causes, but it is morally certain that Decker is guilty of making away with three—bis wife and daughter and grand-daughter—and enough evidence has been found even at this late day to cause the grand jury of Siskyou County to frame true bills, which will be presented to-morrow.

Then a fire that had been smouldering for 27 years burst forth, a fire of vengeance, and the next morning George Decker, a prosperous-farmer and a leading Oddfellow, was placed under fire. This happened six days ago, and to-night the man who paces up and down between the stone walls, for he cannot sleep, is charged with six murders, and it is believed others will be laid to his door.

The grand jury of Siskyou County has been staggered by the evidence brought before it. The foreman said to-day: "What next will come to light? This body has three true bills to present to-morrow and is only waiting to learn if the evidence supporting more will come in."

Revolvers and clubs were used on both sides and before the police separated the combatants, arrested 14 men who were in the thick of the fight and were retreating with their prisoners when the mob turned on them and tried to rescue she men under arrest.

The police charged and the mob fired revolvers at them. More police were summoned and they arrested more rioters. The mob was then dispersed.

Mother and Babe Disappear.

Townstolk often said that she did not live happily with her husband. A year after Yreka was made their home another child was born, a sickly little one that kept its mother busy at home.

The few old residents now recall that about this time Decker left his household to care for itself a great deal and was frequently at the home of a weathy widow named Goodrich. Loud cries were heard in Decker's home ene day. A man ran into the house, home one day. A man ran into the house, and she was saying: "Fli sign. Pleas don't strike, and she put her name to a paper, the contents of which she knew not.

Micher and baby disappeared two weeks later. The whole family had gone out driving and the father had returned with Benny and Eva. His wife and baby, he said, he had placed on a stage. They were going to San Francisco, thence to Cauada.

He appeared in the streets in mourning clothes a month later. "The steamer carry-larg my wife and child was lost in a gale," he said, and much sympathy was shown.

Mrs. Decker No. 2, who was Mrs. Goodrich, was taken ill a year or so later. Neighbors remarked at the time how attentive the husband was. Now they recall that he was so attentive that no one, not even the physician, was allowed at her bedside. Then it became necessary, is his opinion, that she have a change of air, and he took her to San Rafael, among strangers.

He brought back her corpse two weeks later. A Yreka undertaker noticed that the stomach was missing and reckned that the stomach was missing and reckned that the embalmer had removed it. But previous to the death there had been another. Decker had visited his son Benny, way up in Oregon. When he came back he brought a lovely woman, the widow, he said, of his boy, who had died while his father was visiting him. Thus another witness of that ride in the Kildere Hills was out of the way.

Then there came Edward Stone and his wife and babe. Mrs. Stone was the little Rosie, he daughter, and then only living child of Mrs. Goodrich, or Mrs. Decker No. 2.

The treasurer had been twice instructed by the council to open special bank accounts with each statute labor district, and had this been done the general account overdraft at the bank would have appeared still further reduced.

The article states that the Sugar trust not only paid $500,000 for the legislation it wanted, but also guaranteed United States Senators who speculate a rise of 30 points in Wall-street on Sugar trust stock. It is also claimed that the Standard Oil, Lead and Whisky trusts were cared for in the same way. in a disorderly manner at the new Armory last night, when P. C. Kenny ordered him off. Moran became indignant and, picking up a brick, threw it at the officer. He is now in the Agnes-street Police Station. BERLIN, May 14.—The Sydney correspondent of The Frankfurter Zeitung says that on March 3 and 4 a severe earthquake shock shook Mioko, in the Bismarck Archipelago. Nearly all the dwellings were levelled to the ground. Missionaries and traders suffered heavy losses.

Owing to the fact that there was no foundry in the Territories at which a weight could be cast he had to fall back on the old-style scaffold at Regina, some of the portions of which are historic as forming part of the scaffold on which Riel was hanged. It consisted of two posts with strong cross beam, from which dangled a rope about 12 feet long, on the end of which was the regulation "hangman's knot." The structure was about 12 feet high, closely boarded in, and the pit underneath the fatal trap door was about 8 feet, about 3 feet of which was formed by an excavation. Radelive brought back a portion of the scaffold to store with his other "curiosities."

The reprieve of one of the men did not affect the P.E., who has a special clause in his contracts that last minute reprieves did not violate the agreement, since all necessary preparations have to be made.

The annual meeting of the Toronto Relief Society was held in the lecture hall of the Y.M.C.A. Those who are popularly supposed to be weatherwise have predicted a long and hot summer, and apparently the day of the light straw hat will be longer than usual.

All the finest straws worn in Teronto are sold by Messrs. W. & D. Dineen, the famous hatters of the corner of King and Yonge-streets.

In anticipation of an unusually heavy demand the firm has made large importations of the most approved straw hats in this summer's designs, as well as a large stock of light summer felts.

The new English straws are already in—see them at Dineens?
