

schein & Co.)—Eleven lectures, delivered to the girls of the high school in New Zealand by their head mistress, are here given to the public. We are delighted with the book. Among the subjects are, Health, Food, Dress, Books, Money, Manners, Women's Duties, Politics, and Women's Rights. It will be enough to say that the lecturer speaks of these in a calm, sensible, enlightened way, and that there are very few books of this kind for girls that are at once so practical and so inspiring. The motto of the book is appropriate, "Ad Lucem." The work is dedicated to the author's mother.

The Solution of Difficulties in Arithmetic. (London: Moffat & Paige.)—Price 4s. 6d. This collection of problems is large and extremely well arranged. It has already had a large sale, this being the second edition in three months. The examples are selected from papers set at the Oxtord, Cambridge, and London examinations, also the Civil Service, Bankers', Army, Pupil Teachers', etc. The book fills a place hitherto vacant and cannot fail to be useful.

The Ryerson Memorial Volume, 1844-1876. By Dr. J. George Hodgins. (Toronto: Warwick & Sons.)—Every Canadian educator ought to possess this volume, which is an important contribution to Canadian history. The life, public and private, of the most eminent of Canadian educators, and the account of what he did, and of contemporary history and opinion, is beyond question an important subject. Dr. Hodgins has discharged his task with ability and fidelity, and we congratulate him upon the result. It is sometimes true, at least in some respects, that the former days were better than these.

Problems in American Society. By J. H. Crooker. (Boston: George H. Ellis.)—The six essays which make up this neat volume deal with Charity, Temperance, Political Conscience, and other important questions. One of the best is entitled, "The Student in American Life," and all are thoughtful and well written. We are disappointed in the manner of dealing with "Moral and Religious Instruction in the Public Schools." There is too much theory and too little sound knowledge of the needs of this generation shown. The writer sees that teachers should be good men and women, but he does not seem to see how much is lost when they are not suffered to exert the influence that they should over their pupils. There is a vast difference between a Sectarian state and a Christian state.
