The mother began to weep—"oh, Majee, we will not let you die." "But I am glad," the little sufferer replied, "because I shall go to Jesus; if you, mother, would love him, and give up your idols, we should meet again in heaven." An hour afterwards Majee went to heaven, but whether her mother gave up her idols is not known.—Our Children's Magazine.

A NOBLE BOY.—"Why did you not take some of those pears?" said one boy to another; "nobody was there to see." "Yes, there was, I was there myself to see, and I do not ever mean to see myself do such a thing." I looked at the boy who made this noble answer; he was poorly clad, but he had been well taught; and I thought how there were always two to see your sins—yourself and your God.—Teachers' Offering.

"Little children, love each other, Never give another pain; If your brothers speak in anger, Answer not in wrath again.

Be not selfish to each other,
Never mar another's rest;
Strive to make each other happy,
And you will yourselves be blest.'

A Child's Faith.—At the time of a great drought in England, several pious farmers agreed to hold a special meeting to pray for the much-reeded rain. When the appointed time came, the minister was surprised to see one of his little Sabbath-scholars bringing a huge old family umbrella, and asked her why she did so on such a lovely morning. The child gazed at him with evident surprise at the inquiry, and replied, "Why, sir, I thought as we were going to pray God for rain, I'd' be sure to want the umbrella." While they were praying, the wind rose and the clear sky became clouded, which was soon followed by a heavy thunder-storm, by which those who came unprepared to the meeting were drenched, while Mary and the minister were sheltered by the umbrella her faith had led her to bring.

What a sign child did for her Saviour.—The following very affecting and touching illustration of a little girl's love to Christ and his cause was recently brought before the American Board held at Cleveland. It is worthy of being noticed, as both parents and children can learn important lessons from her example. The incident is as follows:—

A little girl of eight years old, who for three years had been confined
