the "constitutional king," Louis Philippe, from 1830 to 1848, of those who were sovereigns for life, or who have executive power for a specified term of years in France, from the days of Louis XV. down to the present time, only one man, Louis XVII., reached the end of his term. Louis XVI. died on the scaffold; his republican successors were either guillotined or assassinated; the First Consul declared himself Emperor and died in exile; Charles X. was driven from the throne by the revolution of 1830, and died in exile; Louis Philippe was dethroned by the revolution of 1848, and ended his career as an exile; the provisional republic of Lamartine, which succeeded him, was a short-lived failure, succeeded by the military dictatorship of Caravaignac; then came the Presidency of Louis Napoleon, which was ended by his coup d'etat of December, 1851, to be followed by the "Empire" in December, 1852, and this, after a lapse of eighteen years, is followed by captivity, dethronement, and exile in 1870.—Phil. Ledger.

A CHANGING NATION.

WITHIN the last seventy-five years France has been three times a republic, three times an imperial monarchy under the Bonapartes, three times a Bourbon kingdom, once a constitutional monarchy under Louis Philippe, and once a military dictatorship under Cavaignac. But even that statement does not show all the changes in the form of government within the period named. The first Napoleon was Consul for a term of years, then Consul for life, then Emperor. Louis Napoleon was first President, then President for life, then Emperor. Of all these various forms of governments the republics have been the shortest-lived, with the single exception of the "hundred days" of the first Napoleon, from March to June, 1815. The duration of the rule of Louis Napoleon, from 1848 to 1852, as President and Emperor, was the longest of all; and next to that was the reign of the "constitutional king," Louis Philippe, from 1830 to 1848. Of those who were sovereigns for life, or who have executive power for a specified term of years in France, from the days of Louis XV. down to the present time, only one man, Louis XVII., reached the end of his term. Louis XVI. died on the scaffold; his republican successors were either guillotined or assassinated; the First Consul declared himself Emperor and died in exile; Charles X. was driven from the throne by the revolution of 1830, and died in exile; Louis Philippe
