The Bishop of Toronto, who had laboured in his diocese for forty years, could have told them...

The Right Reverend CHAIRMAN then rose and said all the resolutions having been passed, the time had arrived for him to make any remarks...

Let them take a single instance of the way in which England had performed her duty to the aborigines...

It is the tendency of the present day to mix up religion such a measure of worldly excitement, as shall make it palatable to the tastes and fancies of men...

The Ven. the Archdeacon of Oxford rose to propose the third resolution. That a Committee, consisting of the Warden of New College, the Master of University College, the Provost of Worcester College, the Rector of Exeter College, the Principal of Brasenose College, the Archdeacon of Oxford, the Rev. R. Walker, the Rev. E. C. Woolcombe, W. Thorpe, Esq., Thomas Joy, Esq., and such of the Parochial Clergy as are subscribers to the Society, be appointed with a view to consider the best means of furthering the general designs of the Society.

The Rev. E. C. WOOLCOMBE seconded the resolution. He said he had been put forward as a proper person from his age and position as Tutor of a College, to express the opinions of the younger members who had been repeatedly alluded to, and on their part he had to say that they asked for no other favour than to be told how they could be of service, for they were abundantly ready to do whatever might be required of them.

The Mayor of Oxford (T. MALLAM, Esq.) said he felt honoured in being allowed the pleasure and satisfaction of seconding the motion of Dr. Marsham.

The Bishop of Oxford rose to thank Dr. Marsham for the kind manner in which he had introduced the motion, and to thank the meeting at large.
