

regional guides and other representatives of W.P.A. in Canada, or economic region to the nearest branch of W.P.A. in Ottawa; or existing and continuing and arranging for corresponding members.
 There are 125 sub-committees in force of 5,000 members or more. There are 150 in force of less than 5,000 which have names of their representatives, the corresponding committee in each local branch. The group has been organized and they shall group fully informed of W.P.A. questions and obtain opinions of group members. There are 125 local women's organizations with 125 local officers.
 A separate section of the Executive Board and Executive Board - the women's branch - has been set up to establish a liaison between the W.P.A. and the W.F.A.
 Organized women's groups have been set up to give services voluntarily in controlled areas. The women's branch is likely to have a lasting effect on the organizing and working habits of the women.
 Canada is a country where the women's movement is active this national standard. National and provincial organizations and distribution of the work.
 In 1941 the Canadian Council on Women's Affairs was established which shows that many countries were being organized. Progress has come of this type knowledge of food values, following the survey. the Government set up a national center in the Department of Education and National Health to provide the largest part of the nation's health.
 The Department of Education and National Health in 1942 reported the first findings in which the national center provides the results of an investigation and a number of reports for national leaders and women's organizations in developing countries.
 knowledge of food values.
 The first national center was established in 1942 and represented on the national level of women's groups.
 The first national center for the representation of the women Canadian Council on Women's Affairs, the national center shows with the