ristian captives at, nhabitants of, 236; 1, 237. Wary device ig the plate found licy of the victors, itulation, 238, note. | z, 238. plas," 320. Trans-

0, note.

inted commander of 9. His attack on ds a bridge across ses over, 491. Re-2. Situation of the ir insubordination, 495. Succeeded by or at the court of character, 528. His , 536. Estates and 7. His flight to the 7.

66. Laws respectfiner, 643.

shed to Ximenes by value, and destruc-ximilian, her union 372, 373. Incidents 72. Her voyage to re, 372, 373. inand and Isabella, ks, 24, note. nt scholar in Spain, ings, 303. Cited retion of justice, 634.

historiographer, 43, , notice of him, and 8, note. His allu-7, 291. Invited to hool for the young urs, 303. Cited reness and death, 511, exed to the crown.

to Ferdinand and ions of the Spanish ruce with the king al to Spain, 487. de Cordova, 531. Venice with Louis

71. Ximenes's ex-

te.

tance of, 653. account of the aid nbus, 273, note.

uished poet in the His influence on evous devastations,

le, facts respecting,

79, note. Marquis of Santilliana, 96. Addresses a remonstrance to the king and queen respecting the hermandad, 133. His magnificent train, 216. His bravery, 216. Opposed to Ximenes, 622.

- Mendoza, Diego de, his rout of the French rear-guard, near Barleta, 461.
- Mendoza, Iñigo Lopez de, marquis of San-tillana, an illustrious wit of the reign of

- John H., 53. His death, 53. Mendoza, Iñigo Lopez de. See Tendilla. Mendoza, Pedro Gonzales de, archishop of Seville and cardinal of Spein, favours Isabella, 99. His bravery at the battle of Toro, 115. Accompanies Isabella, to suppress the tumults at Segovia, 124. Pre-vails on Ferdinand and Isabella to open negotiations with the court of Rome, 140. Favours the Jews, 152. The successor of Carillo, archbishop of Toledo, 195. Sent forward to take possession of the Alham-bra, at the capitulation of Granada, 261. Favours the project of Columbus, 272. His death, 379. His early life, 379. His cha-racter, 379. His amours, 380. The queen his executor, 380. Names Ximenes as his successor, 381.
- Mendoza, Salazar de, justifies Ferdinand's treatment of Navarre, 598, note.
- Merlo, Diego de, his expedition against Alhama, 182, 183.
- Metals, erroneous policy in regard to, 141 In the West Indles, 434, 652. Miguel, son of Emanuel of Portugal, and Isabella, his birth, 377. His recognition as heir to the throne, 378. His death, 378.
- Milan, conquered by the French, 440, 486. Military Orders of Castile, 135. Order of St. Jago, or St. James, of Compostella, 135; of Calatrava, 136, 137; of Alcantara, 136, 137. Their reformation, 138.
- Military service, exacted by the Koran, 16¹ note. Remarks on, 506. Gonsalvo's reform of the, 506.
- Military tactics in Italy, 341.
- Militia, discipline of the, 213. Organization of, 367.
- Mineral wealth of Spain, 166.
- Ministers, resident, first maintained at foreign courts by Ferdinand the Catholic, 196.
- Minturnæ, the ancient city of, ill. 490, note. Miracle of the sun standing still, at the
- storming of Oran, 571, note. Moclin, meeting of Ferdinand and Isabella in the camp before, 216.
- Modern Inquisition, turned against the Jews, 150. Authorized in Castlle, 151. Put into operation at Seville, 152. Its sanguinary operation at Seville, 152. Its sanguinary character, 153. Its final organization, 154. Forms of trial by the, 155; torture, 155. Its injustise, 156. The autos da fe, 157. Convictions under Torquemada, 158, 159. Particulars respecting its introduction into Aragon, 223; remonstrance of the cortes, 223; conspiracy, 224; assassination of Arbues, 224; cruel persecutions, 224. Established throughout Ferdinand's dominions, 225. Remarks on its establishment in Spain, 519, 658. Subsequent troubles from the, 548. Ferdinand's con-duct in regard to the, in Aragon, 613, note. Effects of the, 658. Number of victims of the 650 meter. See Amelent Learning the the, 659, note. See Ancient Inquisition.

Mola di Gaeta, action at the bridge of, 498.

- Moldenhauer, Professor, his visit to Alcalá, respecting the manuscripts used in the Complutensian Polyglot, 583, note.
- Molucca Islands, congress respecting the, 298. Monasteries, their corrupt state, 385. Attempts at reform in, 385, 389.
- Monastic orders, Ximene- attempts to reform the, 389. Great excitement among them, 389.
- Montalvo, Alfonso Diaz de, his work entitled "Ordenanças Reales," 130. Author of other works, 639, note.
- Montilla, demolition of the castle of, 568.
- Montpensier, duke of, left as viceroy of Charles XII. at Naples, 350; his disasters there, 355. Besieged at Ateila, 358. His capitulation, 360. His death, 361.
- Moorish minstrelsy, 314. Its date, 316. Its high repute, 316.
- Moors, religious toleration of the, 3. Their refinements and attainments, 7 Crusade against, under Henry IV. of Castile, 73. Papal indulgences for the prosecution of the war against them, 75. Their deport-ment towards the laws 145 (Their Act ment towards the Jews, 146. Their con-quest of Spain, 162. Their policy towards the conquered, 163. Their intermarriages, 163. Checked by the defeat at Tours, 163. Their form of government, 163. Character and education of their sovereigns, 164. Their military establishment, 164. Sump-tuous public works of the, 164 Husbandry and manufactures among them, 166. Their bigh civilization and prosperity, 167. Their literature under Alhakem II., 167. Intellectual development among them, 167. Contraction of their dominion, 168. Reciprocal civilities between them and the Spaniards, 171. Their gallantry, 171. Their ballads or romances, 171, 177. Their chivalrous character, 172. Their successful resistance in Granada, 173. Literature of the 174. Their biotogical months. the, 174. Their historical merits, 176. Their useful discoveries, 176. Impulse given by them to Europe, 176. Their ele-gant literature, 177. Poeticai character of the, 177. Their influence on Castilian literature, 178. Circumstances prejudicial to their literary reputation, 179. Surprise Zahara, 182. Their reception of the Spanish at Alhama, 184. Besige Alhama, 187, 189. Withdraw, 188, 190. Skirmish with the Spaniards before Loja, 192. Internal dissensions among the, in Granada, 194. Their opposition to the Christians in the consultion to the Avagania 2000. Their expedition to the Axarquia, 200. Their losses at the battle of Lucena, 200. Then losses at the battle of Lucena, 207. Strength of their fortresses, 209, 211. Their modea of defence, 211. Terms to the vanquished, 211. Policy in fomenting the factions among them, 218. Success and advance-ment of the Obsider section 200 (Their ment of the Christlans against, 219. Their