the explorer of the River Mississippi. A cluster of pine trees over 200 years old has grown from the centre of these historical ruins. Getting aboard again, we now really enter the justly renowned Saguenay. At every turn of the boat some new attraction is discovered; our eyes are strained that we may catch a glimpse of all the magnificent grandeur that now bursts upon us.

THE SAGUENAY RIVER

is unquestionably one of the most remarkable rivers of the continent. Its waters are very clear, and abound in a great variety of fine fish. The scenery is wild and romantic in the highest degree. The first half of its course averages half a mile in width, and runs through an almost untrodden wilderness. This wonderful river seems one huge mountain, rent asunder at remote ages by some great convulsion of Nature. The shores are composed principally of granite, and every bend presents to view an imposing bluff. Many of these tower perpendicularly into the air, and seem ready to totter and fall at any moment.

CAPES ETERNITY AND TRINITY

are worthy of note. The first rises to a height of 1,900 feet, and the other only a little less. If the only recompense for the visit to the Saguenay was a sight of these stupendous promontories, we are quite sure no visitor would regret it. The steamers shut off steam when approaching these capes, and the captain shapes his course to give the passengers the best view. The echo produced by the whistle is very fine. The water is said to be deep at the base of the rocks. Cape Eternity is the most imposing. Nothing can surpass the scenery. The fishing of the Marguerite and other steamers glides up the River Saguenay,
