Tells How to Fit Chairs to Clerks

Glaring faults in the sitting posture of store employees are emphasized in a recent report by Dr. Arthur B. Emmons, director of the Harvard Mercantile

"Experience in surveying the twenty-five stores subscribing to the Harvard Mercantile health work," he says, "shows the most glaring examples of bad sitting posture in the alteration of the chair."

In the main office, he says, many stenographers and clerks are found sitting in adjustable chairs which are not adjusted.

He offers the following rules for fitting seating conveniences to the individual worker:

"The cardinal principle to be remembered is 'to bend at the hips, never at the waist.'"

"First. Start with the height of desk (usually thirty inches) or table.

"Second. Subtract the sitting height of the individual from the desk height to determine the height of the work chair seat. This may best be done by trying the worker in chairs of different heights."

"Third. If the feet do not rest comfortably on the floor without the thighs resting heavily on the foot of the chair seat, provide a foot rest or brace. Rarely is a foot rest satisfactory if attached to the chair. Usually it may be attached to the desk or table."

"Fourth. The light coming over the left shoulder is best for general work. Avoid light from directly in front, which reflects glare from the work, and also light from the right, which casts the shadow of the hand on the work. Light from above is also excellent, especially if reflected from the ceiling, as in totally indirect lighting."

Pocket Contents Are Hard on Style

Through the publication of a novel newspaper advertisement recently, Weber & Heilbroner, New York clothiers, brought the store widespread publicity as well as emphasizing in the public mind the interest which the store takes in the customer's appearance, even after the suit has been purchased.

The advertisement represented an inventory which a clothing salesman made of the contents of a customer's pockets, and read:

What do you carry in your pockets? A customer tried on a suit the other day. It fitted so well that he decided to wear it out the store. Before leaving, he transferred from the pockets of the old suit to the new one the following items: Two handkerchiefs, one pair of gloves, one package of tissues, one pencil, one fountain pen, one bunch of keys, one watch, one pair of cuff links, one button, one time-table, three old letters, two boxes matches, one penknife, one put-a-shake, one box of pills, two dollars in change, one spectacle case, one bunch of cigar store coupons.

BOVIARD-CASSIDY.

Alice Boviard Cassidy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Maher of Hampton, N. B., yesterday morning became the bride of John Millidge Boviard, also of Hampton. They were married at six o'clock, with nuptial mass in the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception, by Rev. E. J. McCarthy, in the presence of a few friends and relatives. The bride wore a navy blue serge suit, with hat to match, and a corsage bouquet of panicles and maidenhair fern. The witnesses were Mrs. Chas. A. Kent, sister of the bride, and Amade LeBlanc. Following the ceremony they motored to their bungalow at Hampton. The many gifts testify to the popularity of the bride and groom.

If the day ever comes when hostilities are resumed between Irish and English fighting men, De Valera and the millitary dictators will bear the responsibility. Certainly no body of leaders which will not concede to the Irish people the right to vote upon their own affairs can
