clergyman and several ladies, including Mrs. Hayward, wife of the sheriff. No one else outside the officials was allowed in and service was conducted and a moving touching service could not be conducted. The ladies sang hymns, and after the first hymn George said "sing my favorite one, 'When He Leads I Will Follow.'" This was sung with much feeling and nearly everyone in the corridor, except the condemned man, was brushing the tears. He asked God to save him, he had only a few hours to live in this wicked world, he asked forgiveness and for God to give him strength to walk out to meet death tomorrow.

In response to a question from the clergyman, Gee said he would like to play. Then, in a firm voice, he offered up a simple prayer, while his hearers wept. He asked God to save him, he had only a few hours to live in this wicked world, he asked forgiveness and for God to give him strength to walk out to meet death tomorrow.

He prayed for only a few minutes and after the prayer, Radcliffe, who had come into the corridor with the tears coursing down his cheeks, asked the minister to sing "that lovely hymn 'There is Yet Time,'" but as those present did not know it Radcliffe requested that "I will allow you to sing 'There is Yet Time.'" After singing a couple more hymns the service was closed at 5 o'clock, with singing of "God Be With You Till We Meet Again." The ladies shook hands with Gee and with a good bye and God bless you, he was again alone in his cell. Gee said he thought the service a good one.

STORY OF THE CRIME FOR WHICH GEE HAS DIED ON SCAFFOLD. The crime for which George Gee was executed was committed early Sunday morning, March 16th last. The Gee's have been residents of Cacton county for many years and came of a good family. The original Gee belonged to the celebrated 10th Regiment, and in the war of 1812, he conducted himself in such a manner as to earn commendation. George was the only son of Benjamin and Zora Gee. The circumstances surrounding his life were rare. He grew up in a community where moral laws were lax.

Service Held With Gee's Radcliffe There. Executioner Weeps With Othe, and Names Hymns He'd Like to Have Sung—Gee Discusses Cinnamon. At the request of G. G. The Telegraph representative visited the condemned man in the jail this morning and between puffs of smoke from his cigar, Gee talked freely about his life and his happy experiences that he had during his life time. He said that for years before he went to jail, he did nothing but try to get on. He said that he had a very good time on some time on his heating exploits. "Do you know," said he to the reporter, "how to cook a partridge in the oven? I can tell you. I have a lot of good ideas. I have done a lot of things. In fact, I think I know too much about the handling of a gun."

He added: "As the dominant race, if we admitted equality with inferior races, we would lose the power which gave us our dominance."

George Gee, Hanged for the Murder of His Cousin Millie. who had been keeping company with Millie, brought with him to the house the barrowed rifle and two quart bottles of whiskey. Everybody soon began playing cards, and there does not appear to have been any quarrelling. During the night George and Millie went out of doors, and were out some little time. They came back. Then about 2:30 in the morning, George got up to go for good. Millie got him the rifle and went with him out of doors. After a while those in the house heard the report of the rifle. Millie fell in the door. It was found a bullet had passed through her body about the hips. George went on his way. He at once went to the nearest telephone office and asked that the doctors be called. A girl was badly shot "and had done the deed." He also telephoned to the deputy sheriff, and he was ready to give himself up. When the doctors arrived they decided to operate on the girl, all agreeing that the bowels were perforated. The operation showed that their diagnosis was a mistake, for there was no perforation of the intestines. It was found after the girl's death that the bullet had passed through the body of the fourth lumbar vertebrae, that the OLDEST CITY OF THE WORLD DISCOVERED.

Archaeologists Unearth the Ancient Adab in Babylonia.

Chicago, July 19.—Urukki, the ancient Adab, perhaps the oldest city in the world, has been discovered by the University of Chicago's excavating expedition in Babylonia. This city has for many years been the object of search by orientalist. It is mentioned in the code of Hammurabi, an early king of Babylonia, which document was translated recently by Professor Robert F. Harper, director of the expedition. He has just received news here in a cablegram from Prof. E. G. Banks, field director of the expedition. The uncovering of ancient Adab is one of the most important archaeological achievements of recent years. Dr. Banks informed Prof. Harper that he had found bricks bearing the cuneiform characters of the city of Adab. He is certain that these bricks identify the city of Adab. With a force of 120 men he excavated the ruins at Urukki and found the remains of four temples, but one above the other, which he named according to the kings who built them. The dates became earlier until finally the bricks identifying Urukki were found. Among other articles which Dr. Banks found are marble statues, sandstone lamps and many bronze objects.

MILLIE GEE, The Girl for Whose Murder George Gee Was Hanged. of a deliberate murderer. It was also shown that the parents of the young man were second cousins; that an uncle, great uncle and cousin of the father had been confined in the insane asylum, and that two cousins of the father had also been in that institution. The jury did not find the evidence of insanity sustained and brought in a verdict of murder. George and Bennie. I. Chip Harby was counsel for Gee, and Attorney General Pugsley prosecuted. After the verdict was rendered, Bennie Gee, who was the strongest witness against George, visited him in jail. The latter accused Bennie of taking his girl away from him and pronounced him the true murderer of Millie. "Since the sentence was imposed, the prisoner was kept in a roomy clean cell, in the new jail. He slept well and had good appetites. Not once did his nerve give. As the trial day approached he maintained his stoical calm, frequently, he was heard to laugh. It was a soldier's pride in his manly care free. He expressed contrition, but seemed satisfied that the girl is dead. "I have never had any happiness in this world," he remarked, "and the next cannot be worse."

His Last Days. Since the trial, the parents have been frequent visitors to the Woodstock jail, that they might comfort, as best they could, their son. The mother is good looking and shows much interest, photographs of her son, and his victim. The prisoner had but small faith in the petition praying for mercy and seemed but little disappointed when told that his friends' efforts were unavailing. The interest taken in his spiritual welfare was very general, and the youth received those attentions in a most kind and repentant spirit. A constant attendant has been Rev. Mr. Crane, pastor of the Advent church, Woodstock. The Salvation Army have also held services on Sunday afternoons in the corridor of the jail leading from the cell in which Gee was kept. Since the tragedy there have been revival services in the neighborhood where the crime was committed. Gee's father and mother have been converted and George received baptism in the jail, at the hands of Mr. Crane. The condemned man talked of the disposal of his body, but at showing any symptoms of nervousness. He requested that his body be buried by the side of the girl he killed. One gloomy feature of the case was the number of applications received for the task of hanging the prisoner. One man offered to conduct the execution for $250. Another wanted $250. But few of the communications were answered.
