industry and would be a hard blow to Brantford.

Mr. Good who represented the U.F.O., and asked that action be deferred until the farmers could present their case to the citizens of Brantford while Mayor McBride declared that the workingmen were little interested in, that it was a fight between two capitalistic organizations. He declared the Federal Government had no mandate to change the tariff and he advised them to bring in the budget and stand or fall by it, or else submit a referendum to the people. When a vote was taken there was but one registered opposition, although a number did not vote.

Mrs. S.W. Secord, president of the Equal Franchise Club was in the chair. Senator Fisher of Paris sent his regrets.

"The watchdog of our interests at Ottawa" as Mrs. Secord terms W.F. Cookshutt M.P., was first to present the tariff issue as affecting Brantford. He pointed out that when protection was first introduced in Canada 40 years ago, Brantford was a hamlet. It was now the fourth exporting city in the world. The benefits had been reaped not only by the heads of the factories, but they who plied their tools in the shops and the farmers of Brantford who largely benefited.

No Mandate. Mr. Cookshutt then referred to the demands of the farmers upon the Unionist Government which he emphasized had been elected upon a war issue. In the campaign here he had not spent five minutes in tariff talk. The House elected on a war issue has no mandate to make drastic changes in the financial policy of the country.

The price of our prosperity is permanent watchfulness" declared he, telling of the demands of the Western members and quoting of the platform of the United Farmers of Canada.

He declared he was one of the last to raise trouble between any classes but no longer could it be said that Canada was a purely agricultural country. Fully half of the people of Canada were in the cities.

It was no time for a policy of destruction in a time of chaos. It was too late to tell people to go back to the farm. Response to the appeal to go back to the land would mean overproduction with no market. There was no place for overproduction and any cutting down of the tariff without regard to consequences would be destructive.

Buy in the United States. The United Farmers of Canada had made 44 per cent last year. In effect they declared that they were to be robbed if would be by the United States manufacturers and that the States manufacture had not by the Canadian. Their rules list contained but one article made in Canada, a wagon made at Petrolia. Every other article practically everything a farmer needed came from the United States. The leader in the Commons threatened to boycott the East and ended up by demanding a sustained Government price for wheat.

In round figures in five years, Mr. Cookshutt said, farm implements increased in cost from 80 per cent to 90 per cent. But for what the farmer produces he receives three times the former price. If the farmers were to get these high prices now could the workers afford to pay them unless there was a market for their output. A farmer to-day could come in with a load of produce and buy more implements than ever before. There was more chance of free trade being displaced in England than of Canada adopting free trade, said Mr. Cookshutt. As for the farmers' proposal to raise income taxes, Toronto alone paid more last year than the three Western provinces. The Westerners' demands would mean the destruction of the East. The wage scale could not be kept up if the protection given were removed.

Not Excessive. The tariff on agricultural implements was not excessive. For Western farmers, the average per farm for tariff on farm implements was but $25. How much did that affect the $2 wheat in United States wheat? Canadian wheat being on the free list, Mr. Cookshutt pointed out that one Canadian farm had gone $100,000 wrong in the balance sheet because of this and such would happen to the implements trade if the tariff were off. He declared he had been pacific and conciliatory. He had been willing to have the 7 1/2 per cent war tax ended, even if it meant the loss of $45,000,000. That was as much as we, in the City of Brantford can afford to go, he said. He asked for resolutions to send to Ottawa to define Brantford's attitude.

John Harold, of Paris, Liberal-Unionist member for Brantford, believed that if the Westerners were given what they wanted, Brantford returned soldiers would find no jobs when they returned home. It was strange to find him a believer in a lower tariff, on the same platform with Mr. Cookshutt but circumstances were changed and he instanced the need for increased revenue.

The West purchased 17,000 automobiles last year, and they were not asking that the 35 per cent tariff, these be cut off. Yet the agricultural implement industry was asked to sacrifice the protection of an 18 1/2 per cent tariff. The semi-official attitude was to leave the tariff alone until it could be gone over intelligently. He looked to Hamilton and Toronto to speak no uncertain word of protest.

Mr. Harold emphasized the possibilities of export trade, Canada alone being in a position to compete with the trade in these would mean that Canadian plants would either close up or be crippled. The East and West traffic was essential for the railways of Canada, most of which were now Government owned.

"It is absolutely incongruous that in this country we should have a class against class when all have worked in harmony" he concluded, and he expressed the hope that East and West would get together and work a solution.

Farmer Speaks. A time limit of 10 minutes was placed by the presiding officer on W.C. Good, representing the Brant County Board of Agriculture. To this Mr. Good answered that the farmers would call a meeting of citizens to present their case. He regretted that there were no Western farmers present to answer Mr. Cookshutt.

He suggested that Mr. Cookshutt study the Western farmers viewpoint sympathetically. What was needed was cooperation between the manufacturers and their best customers, the farmers. There was no ill-will on the part of the farmer and he was confident that if the two got together a compromise could be arrived at. Mr. Good quoted the Ontario amendment to the Western farmers platform which called for elimination of all tariff on raw materials. The case of the tractors was unfair in that the duty on tractors was taken off but not the duty on raw materials.

The U.F.O. of Ontario 30,000 strong were united in favor of the policy of the Western farmers said Mr. Good. As for the price of wheat the Canadian Council of Agriculture had opposed a fixed price for wheat only the Saskatchewan farmers asking for this. The only argument for the tariff as a revenue producer was that it was a case of "plucking the goose with the least squeak."

A Lifelong Liberal. John Muir a lifelong Liberal chief here asked not whether the audience was Tory or Tory high or low protectionist or "United Brethren" but he desired to defend an industry which has not been treated fairly. The first half of his life he had spent trying to dig an honest dollar out of the old farm. Mr. Good he said, had taken much of the wind out of his sails by admitting that the tractor industries had not been treated fairly. It was more than unfair—it was a crime. The action meant a handout of $224 on the Canadian manufacturer. They had kept up their organization hoping to get justice later.

The employees of his firm had bought Victory bonds for $50,000 and the Government had bought U.S. tractors. "Put agricultural implements on the free list and there will be no housing problem in Brantford. There will be houses to spare and the farmers will get cheaper labor, but the value of farm land will go down," declared Mr. Muir.

As for the war tax he said, the manufacturers never asked for it and were willing to have it removed tomorrow. He contended that with unrest it was most disastrous to bring such a contention as tariff revision in the Federal House at this time. A Resolution. Ald. Clement presented a resolution protesting against any change in the tariff without reference to a tariff commission to consider the whole tariff question. Ald. Clement is an employee of a local implement factory and a member of the Independent Labor party. C.A. Watkinson supported the resolution in a brief address in which he strongly protested against action in this contentious matter before a thorough investigation.

Mr. Good asked that the matter be deferred until the farmers had presented their case. Delegate J. E. of the Trades and Labor Council stated that the delegates had come for information only and could make no decision. The meeting called for a vote and a standing vote was taken. There was but one opposed, though a number did not vote. The great proportion of the audience was in favor.

A resolution favoring the continuance of oleomargarine was presented by Mrs. W.C. Livingston, seconded by Mrs. S. Alfred Jones and unanimously approved.

Mr. W.S. Brewster presented a resolution protesting against elimination of the tariff on agricultural implements. He commented that 4,000 men in Brantford were employed in this, while it was peculiar that this one industry had been singled out. It looked as if the Western farmers were trying to evade paying their fair share of the taxes. "Simply means that the people of the East would have to pay their share also. Cutting off the tariff would paralyze Brantford industry."

Justice Logie quashed London's daylight saving by-law on the ground that a municipality cannot override provincial laws, which fix standard time.

Rev. Dr. Herbert Laing, president of Halifax Ladies' College since its establishment, died after brief illness.
