Black/African History Month Celebration

• The Association of African Students at York University in conjunction with the Caribbean Students Associations and York Against Apartheid are making all necessary preparations to celebrate the black history month celebrations at York University with great historical and multicomplex reflections.

• Throughout this month of historical reflections,

February 1st-March 1st,

black students at York University will organize activities ranging from orientation of new black students, African Art and craft display, garment and African books sales, symposiums and discussions of different kinds, film shows, establishment of emergency relief loan program to aid black students in need, and get together in order to heighten the oneness of the origin of the black population the world over; facilitate greater awareness about mistreatment meted on the black population all over the world; create an awareness about the inalienable dignity and historical heritage of the black population the world over, and the need for humanely change in attitude towards the blacks.
